

CONFESSES TWO CRIMES

BERKELEY'S ROBBER IN MESH OF POLICE

Admits He Stole Watches From Oakland Store Recently.

Despite the previous positive statement of Al Johnson, the fleet-footed and nimble-fingered young man from the east, who was caught and jailed shortly after stealing a tray of jewels and money from the jewelry store of R. L. Miller on Center street in Berkeley Friday afternoon, that this was the only crime he had ever committed, he last night confessed to the recent theft of a handful of watches from William B. Greenbaum's jewelry store at 127 San Pablo avenue. And there are other thefts which have for some time past been a puzzle to the local police which may be traced to him.

BOLD ROBBERY.

The attempt to steal the belongings of Miller was one of the boldest, if not actually the boldest robbery, ever brought to the attention of the authorities of Berkeley, but it was no more daring than Johnson's theft of the watches from Greenbaum, whose place of business is within a stone's throw of the central police station.

He entered the jewelry establishment on San Pablo avenue early in the evening when the street was brightly lighted and crowded with pedestrians and after asking to see an article of jewelry, waited until the proprietor's back was turned and then darted from the store with watches of considerable value. Although there was a hue and cry of "stop thief," he made good his escape, and up to this time the police were in the dark as to the identity of the thief.

IDENTIFIED ROBBER.

Last evening Captain of Police Petersen, in company with Greenbaum, visited the county jail for the purpose of determining whether the latter could identify Johnson as the man who had taken the watches. Johnson no sooner saw the officer than he walked over to Chief Jailer White and said: "That fellow has got something on me, too."

And he was correct, for Greenbaum positively identified him as the thief and Johnson, in a few moments, confessed to the crime. The stolen watches have been located in a San Francisco pawnshop, and will be returned to the owner shortly.

And this is not all the evidence against Johnson. He has confessed to the robbery of the Miller and Greenbaum stores, but the police are anxious to connect him with recent jewelry robberies of daring character in the east, particularly in Chicago. It is stated that this will be but a matter of a few days, as jewelry from eastern establishments has been located in San Francisco, and it is thought it was pawned there by Johnson.

MAY TELL ALL.

LONGWORTHS HOME AGAIN

President's Family Grooms the Young Couple on Return From Bridal Tour.

QUARANTINE STATION, Staten Island, Aug. 11.—When the steamship St. Paul, of the American line, arrived here this afternoon she was met by the dispatch boat Stip, which had been sent here from Oyster Bay by President Roosevelt, to meet his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, who were passengers aboard returning from a most triumphant visit abroad.

The Longworths, on the return trip, were fully as much a feature as they were on the outward voyage, and were the center of many merry parties, participating as they did, in all the festivities on board, and it was with genuine regret that their fellow voyagers saw them go down the gang plank to the launch of the yacht that was to transfer them to Oyster Bay.

LEAVE SHIP.

They were permitted to leave the ship as soon as she was passed by the quarantine officials and took off only the most important of their baggage, permitting the rest of it to remain aboard to be sent to them later. They are to remain in Oyster Bay only a few days and it is likely they will take up their residence in the Longworth mansion in Cincinnati before the latter part of next week.

Appropos of this some of the fellow passengers of the young couple tell a good story that indicates that the Roosevelt love for flight is predominant in the young Mrs. Longworth, who is a true Roosevelt in this respect. There were a couple of young women from Ohio who made it their business, as soon as they had met Mrs. Longworth and properly gushed over her, to tell her that an attempt was to be made to beat Longworth for re-election at the coming fall election.

EYES FLASH.

While Mrs. Longworth, of course, knew that her husband was to have opposition in his district, this is likely the first time that she had been informed of the fact that he was in danger of defeat. Her eyes flashed at the information, but she quietly answered: "Oh, is that so; well, let me tell you that if they beat Mr. Longworth they will know that they have been in a fight."

The report of this conversation circulated throughout the ship and as a result it made many friends of those who did not know the president's daughter.

HOT FIGHT.

According to what the congressman told some of his fellow passengers he is going right back to Cincinnati and put up a hot fight for re-election. He realized that it would be fine campaign material for the Democrats to point out his defeat, and he will try to split that at least. He admitted, however, he would have to spend lots of time in his home district, as by reason of charged conditions in Cincinnati, where the Geo. B. Cox rule is no longer absolute, the Democrats are about to put up a sharp opposition, thinking that they have a chance to win out.

GROOM WAS CONVICT WHO HAD ESCAPED

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Aug. 11.—A one week after he married Miss Allans Mann, the pretty eighteen year old daughter of a saw mill owner by whom he was employed, Frank Byram was arrested at Utica, Miss., as an escaped convict and taken back to Bratt City, Ala. He had been here six weeks and his criminal record was not ever suspected. It is said he has another wife living near Birmingham.

TEMPORARY BUILDING FOR THE INSANE

Supervisors to Be Asked to Provide Addition to County Infirmary.

Owing to certain facts brought to light during the examination of Miss May Barry as to her sanity yesterday before Judge Harris, the Board of Supervisors may take steps to build an addition to the county infirmary in which persons who are mentally deranged but merely temporarily and who give signs of improvement may be confined. The need of such a place was brought forcibly to the attention of the jurist and the examining physicians yesterday.

PITIFUL CASE.

The case of Miss Barry is a most pitiful one. As has been told in the columns of THE TRIBUNE her mind became unbalanced through the loss of a ladies' tailoring establishment, which she owned, in the recent fire in San Francisco. She attempted her life by jumping from a second-story window in the residence of M. R. Hayes in East Oakland Thursday night and was then taken to the detention ward of the receiving hospital, where she was held pending the examination as to her sanity, which ended in her being committed to the state hospital for the insane at Stockton.

ROMANCE REVEALED.

Her examination also resulted in the uncovering of a romance. Both Miss Barry and Hayes lost their all in the San Francisco fire. They had been acquainted for some time past and were about to be married when the woman's mind became deranged. It was not only the loss of her business that caused her condition, but also the fact that a sister has but recently died. Two such troubles following one upon the other caused her to completely lose her mental balance.

"What is your relationship to this woman?" asked Judge Harris of Hayes.

"I was about to make her my wife," he replied.

It was with tears in his eyes that Hayes told of her condition in court and he was exceedingly anxious that arrangements be made whereby Miss Barry could be sent to some institution other than that for the insane.

NO SUITABLE PLACE.

Through this plea the fact that no county institution exists where mentally deranged people can be sent for a short period of time was brought out. In speaking of this matter last evening Dr. Shirk said: "I am called into the examination of many persons who are mentally ill. In a great number of cases there is nothing that could be done but to send them to the asylums for the insane. But in the case of Miss Barry it is different. There we have an estimable young woman who in all probability will regain her mental equilibrium within six or eight weeks. In my opinion her mind has been but temporarily deranged through worry over loss of business and the death of a sister. Should she recover she will feel keenly the fact that she has been an inmate of an asylum for the insane."

ADDITION TO INFIRMARY.

"I mentioned this fact to Judge Harris yesterday and asked him if he did not think it would be a good idea to

SUICIDE, NOT MURDER, SAYS MAN'S FRIEND

The inquest into the death of Charles H. Bishop, the prominent Elk who committed suicide Thursday night in East Oakland, will be held this morning at ten o'clock at the local morgue.

G. D. Freeth, an old time friend of Bishop, visited the morgue last night and told of having seen Bishop early Thursday evening.

The two met in front of a second hand store on Seventh street.

Bishop complained of being ill, saying he was suffering from throat trouble. Before Freeth left him, the suicide went into the second hand store and purchased a revolver. Freeth identified the weapon which was found on Bishop's breast, as the one which he saw the man purchase.

MASKED BALL IN STABLES

MRS. WILLIAM G. ROELKER, Who Will Give a Unique Ball at Newport.

Original Idea Advanced by a Newport Hostess for the Coming Event.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 11.—Mrs. William G. Roelker's masked ball, to be held some time this month in her stables, is already attracting much attention among the smart set. She has been commended for the originality of this stable idea at a time when something is needed to enliven the incessant round of formal dinners.

It is given out that the decorations will be purely equine. Festoons of harness and strings of carriage lamps will lend themselves to beautifying the interior, while the courtyard will be illuminated by electric lights hidden behind miniature haystacks.

Society still talks of the Roelker rose dinner. When her twenty guests were bidden to the large dining room they beheld apparently growing from a silver bowl in the center a rose vine extending V-shaped toward the corners of the room. This V expanded forty-five feet across and 3800 roses were used in making the vine.

MAY BE NEPHEW

TOLEDO, Ohio, Aug. 11.—Charles E. Funston, representative of the North American Mutual Life Insurance company, of Mansfield, and said to be a nephew of Brigadier General Funston, committed suicide in his apartments at the St. Charles hotel Friday afternoon, by drinking prussic acid. His death was discovered today. A note left by the deceased said: "Father dead, mother dead, life dead, no children, no home, no money—no use living. Please notify my sister, Miss Nettie Funston, Columbus, Ohio. (Signed) 'CHARLES E. FUNSTON.'"

MINNEAPOLIS' POPULATION IS 300,000

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Aug. 11.—Minneapolis has passed the 275,000 mark, and, with the many persons who have come in the past two months to make Minneapolis their home, the city can truly be said to be close to 300,000.

This result is shown by the new 1906 directory, which contains 132,005 names.

Using the multiple 24, which is lower than is generally used, in computing population, from the directory, the Minneapolis book indicates a population of 297,011.

A gain of 17,190 since the issue of the last directory. The state census last year showed 261,274, and adding the 17,190 new names alone would make a percent population of 278,464.

SEATTLE REFEREE

SEATTLE, Aug. 11.—James W. Morrison of this city has been asked to referee the coming fight between Gans and Nelson at Goldfield. Morrison, who is well known throughout coast sporting circles, lived at Goldfield for a time and established his reputation. This afternoon E. R. Hughes, sporting editor of the Times, received a telegram from Billy Nolan, asking whether Morrison would agree to referee, and stating that he was acceptable to both parties.

SCHOOL BONDS CARRY BY HUGE MAJORITY

Very Light Vote Cast, but Majority Is Five to One in Favor of Proposition—Only One District Votes Against Measure.

The school bonds were carried yesterday by a handsome majority, the results showing a ratio of five in favor to one against. The total vote cast was 792, whereas at the bond election two years ago, 3905 votes were polled.

The only district which went against the proposition was the first, the Peralta school annex. In this district, six votes were polled, two in favor of the proposition and four against. At the last bond election this district went the same way.

The largest number of votes in a single precinct were cast in the eighth, the Durant-school district. One hundred and eight votes were cast in all,

CARRIERS OF HOOD WANT RAISE OF WAGES

Demand Increase of Minimum From $4 to $4.50 and $5 Per Day.

Tomorrow morning, before going to work, members of the Oakland Laborers' Protective association, generally known as the "Hoodcarriers' union," will demand an increase in wages, according to the kind of work performed, from $4 per day, the minimum now allowed by the union for laboring work, to $4.50 and $5 per day.

The $4.50 wage will be demanded by bricklayers' helpers, and the $5 per day rate by the helpers of plasterers.

This action was taken last night at a meeting of the association in labor headquarters at Eighth and Broadway.

There was a large attendance of the members of the organization, and a spirited discussion was held, in which many of the members took part.

MEN FROM SAN FRANCISCO.

Among those present were a number of laborers from San Francisco, who have found employment on this side of the bay.

These were allowed the freedom of the hall, and, at times, were called upon to give information as to what wages were paid men doing laboring work in San Francisco. At 11 o'clock, when the discussion, pro and con, had come to a close, and the taking of a vote to settle the question had been decided upon, the San Franciscans retired from the meeting. This action was taken at the request of the presiding officer so that no question might be raised as to the legality of the vote.

SOME OPPOSE INCREASE.

Despite the fact that an increase in wages is usually greatly to be desired, there were men on the floor who opposed the demanding of increased wages. These men argued generally as well as those who favored the increase in the per diem with the result that the proposition to demand the increase in wages referred to was carried by a majority of only about ten or fifteen votes.

The decision was not satisfactory to all and, as a consequence, when some of the members left the place of meeting they gave expression to the keenest kind of disappointment.

The meeting, however, was decorous and outside influence seemed to have no effect upon it.

GET HIGHER WAGES.

Regardless of the fact that the minimum scale of wages for what are known as "plasterers' laborers" and "bricklayers' laborers" is $4 per day, some of the plasterers' laborers have been receiving as much as $5 per day. This was the wage paid by contractors who discriminated in the class of labor they employed and who were willing to pay laborers more than the schedule rate, provided the laborers did the work required of them.

CONTRACTORS CONSULTED.

Contracting bricklayers were consulted before this move was made and they declared that, under no circumstances

MOTHER AND BABES TO LIE SIDE BY SIDE

Victims of Alameda's Triple Tragedy of a Few Days Ago to Be Buried Today at One Funeral.

ALAMEDA, Aug. 11.—Side by side in Evergreen cemetery Mrs. Helen Hersey and her two babies will be laid away Sunday. Mother and children have gone to their deaths without ever having regained consciousness to tell why and how the mother turned on the gas, placed her babies in bed, and then crept in beside them to wait for death.

Never will it be known why the woman committed the abhorrent act, for the note she left throws but little light on her reason. Whether her mind was deranged or she was brooding over family differences will undoubtedly be made known at the inquest.

One funeral served for wife and children, and the father will be the chief mourner. They have but few relatives on the coast, being eastern people, and the white hearse of the babies and the sombre vehicle which carries the mother will be followed to the grave by but a few of the closest friends.

The coroner's inquest has been set for Thursday morning at nine o'clock. The physicians who attended the victims of the deadly fumes and the husband will be the witnesses.

ONLY ONE OPPOSED.

In the Washington school district fifteen votes were in favor of the bonds, while only one voted against them. In the Harrison school district the result was very much in favor of the proposition, forty-seven votes being cast in favor of it, with only one against it.

In no district was the vote close, the majorities ranging from three to one to forty-seven to one.

The result was somewhat of a surprise.

ROMANCE OF PRISON ENDS IN MARRIAGE

Man Meets Bride Before His Incarceration and Marries Her When He Is Pardoned by Governor.

ROME, N. Y., Aug. 11.—A romance that was begun in the state prison at Dannemora, N. Y., had its culmination at a small village seven miles north of here, when John Watson Hildreth of New York city, son of lawyer J. H. Hildreth, was married to Miss Anna C. Ryding, daughter of William Ryding, of Syracuse, N. Y. The fact that the wedding had taken place was made public by the filing of the certificate of marriage here today.

MACDONOUGH BLOCK IS REPORTED SOLD

According to strong rumors in real estate circles in this city and San Francisco, a deposit of $10,000 was paid at noon yesterday through the office of the Realty-Bonds and Finance Company at Fourteenth street and Broadway for the purchase of the Macdonough building, the total price of the property being fixed at $100,000. The building, which is situated on the corner of Fourth and Broadway streets, is one of the handsomest in San Francisco, and is owned by the Macdonough family. It is reported that the building will be sold to a syndicate of investors, and that the sale will be completed within a few days.

WILL WED AT LAST

Young Man, Despite His Mother, Awaits Majority to Marry.

James Richard McKinless, who resides with his mother, Mrs. H. C. McKinless at 950 Bush street has heard, he says, that all the world loves a lover. He is of the opinion, however, that while this may be true in most instances, he, as a lover and would be husband, has met with enough difficulties in his own love affairs to make any young man feel that he is an exception to the rule so far as all the world is concerned.

And this was not the only step, it is said, that Mrs. McKinless took to keep the young lovers apart for the present, at least. Some months ago she so arranged affairs that her son got an urgent telegram from the Union Trust Company of New York which in building his grandfather's money in trust for him to come on and see the matter. Young McKinless took the bait and went east but he soon suspected that all was not as it should be to his liking and he surprised his mother by arriving in Oakland some time before the expected date.

When Mrs. McKinless was questioned about the letter she had sent to the county clerk's, she stated that she objected to her son's marriage for the reason that he was not of age and that she had to help support him. She further stated that while she was aware of the fact that her boy wanted to get married, he had not advised her as to who he was intending to marry and that she had been misled by him.

ROBBER CONFESSES

That night, that if the authorities could find that he was guilty of any robbery as he did in the Greenbaum case, he would confess to having committed them, but that he would not vouchsafe any information which would lead to connecting him with any crimes. He seems to feel that he is in an exceedingly tight corner, and it is thought that within a short time he will make a clean breast of his past record, with the hope that he will find the courts lenient when he comes up for trial.

Grand Larceny Charge.

An old criminal, it is said, will at once give up and tell all he knows when he sees that he is cornered, but Johnson is aggravating to the police, as he refuses to enlighten them as to any of his movements prior to his arrival in this city, although he appreciates the fact that he will without much doubt find himself convicted on one or more serious charges. He will not be tried on anything milder than grand larceny.

Johnson says that his father is the proprietor of a gambling establishment in New York City, and says that he committed the theft in Berkeley for the double reason that he wanted to return home, and that he wanted to make up what he had lost on races and at cards since his arrival on this coast some weeks ago.

approach the supervisors of this county and request them to build an addition to the county infirmary in which persons who are insane and who give evidence of rapid improvement could be confined. In this way there would be no stigma attached to the name of the unfortunate, for a season of care at such an institution would be vastly different to being confined in one of the state institutions for the insane.

WAGE BATTLE ON THE BAY.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 11.—Union pickets and the non-union crew of the Carolina were engaged in a fierce battle on the bay tonight near the Broadway-street wharf. The men of the Carolina were putting out to the vessel in a launch when another launch containing the pickets steamed up near them. A shot was fired and almost on the same instant a volley rang out from both vessels, owing to the darkness no one was hit.

HOW RAISE WAS REACHED.

In reaching a conclusion last night, therefore, the Oakland Laborers' Protective Association voted in favor of demanding the maximum wages, which, it is said, certain contractors are now paying and which others are willing to pay, namely $5 for plasterers' laborers and $4.50 per day for bricklayers' laborers.

CAR HITS A WAGON

Dashes Down Hill Into Vehicle, Injuring Two Persons.

A produce wagon, driven by R. Bertreccelli of 973 Third street, was struck by a Twelfth street car between Fallon and Oak streets, about 8.30 o'clock last night. The two horses were killed, the driver and a passenger on the car injured, and the car badly damaged.

Bertreccelli was driving towards Broadway, and had just crossed the Twelfth street dam. He was following a westbound car, and when about half way up the incline between Fallon and Oak streets, turned into the track of the eastbound car, in front of the Twelfth street car, which was rushing down the hill.

HITS WAGON.

The motorman saw the wagon in front of him, but could not stop his car in time to prevent the collision. The car ran headlong into the horses and wagon, and both of the animals were almost instantly killed. The shafts and seat of the wagon were wrecked, while the fruit and vegetables were thrown about the street.

Bertreccelli was thrown several feet into the air by the impact, and sustained a contusion of the right elbow and the left knee.

He was removed to the Receiving hospital, where his injuries were attended by Dr. Irwin.

CAR DAMAGED.

The car, which was No. 302, was badly damaged. Its front end was smashed in. A passenger, seated in the front of the car, was slightly injured during the collision.

When Bertreccelli was hurled to the ground, his money was thrown about the street, and for several hours after the accident a gang of men and boys searched for the coin.

GOLD CROSS DROPPED IN MAN'S UMBRELLA

FORT WORTH, Texas, Aug. 11.—While a San Antonio hotel clerk was in Columbus, rain fell, and, opening his umbrella, a gold cross fell out. He at once remembered that while standing at a railroad ticket office in Alamo City, a woman who was nearby told a special officer that her gold cross had disappeared as if by magic.

She went to Galveston on an early train and the hotel clerk went his way to Columbus, never thinking of the occurrence and the jewelry fell to the pavement.

The cross and chain were returned to the owner.

POLICE AFRAID

Russians Now Give Each Officer Soldiers as a Guard.

WARSAW, Aug. 11.—The state of affairs in Poland has reached a most extraordinary stage. The conflict between the government's secret men and the revolutionaries now includes a phase in which the life of a police spy is sought with a deadly purpose by the extremists, which has resulted in the killing of ten police agents and the wounding of several more.

SLAUGHTER SPIES.

On the other hand the revolutionaries, having identified a spy, shadow him to the headquarters. When the headquarters are discovered they are raided and all the spies are slaughtered or captured. Several of these raids have been successfully carried out recently.

Only the small gatherings of revolutionaries are tolerated by the police. The large meetings are held with impunity. The revolutionaries at these meetings are in part armed and the protection thus afforded makes them safe from police visitation, the police having an insufficient force to engage in battle with the desperate extremists.

TABLES TURNED.

Another aspect of the present situation is shown by the fact that where formerly the police constantly stopped passers by in the street and demanded their passports, the revolutionaries now stop people and pick out the spies. When one is found the revolutionaries immediately provoke a quarrel with the agent and in the mixup he is usually killed.

The regular police have been so terrorized that the authorities are now giving each policeman twelve soldiers as a guard.

PICKS POCKET WHILE IN CUSTODY

WALLA WALLA, Aug. 11.—William Callahan is under arrest at the county jail charged with picking the pockets of J. A. Scott, of Spokane. Callahan is alleged to have committed the crime while on his way from Walla Walla to Wallula, and the capture was made at the latter place. While in the custody of an officer at Wallula Callahan picked the pockets of a bystander, and was caught in the act.

LADIES PROTEST

Were Arrested for Speeding Too Fast in an Automobile.

The police continued their crusade on speeding motorists yesterday, and four were placed under arrest. They were D. H. Gray, C. H. Waycott, S. D. Hastings and D. C. McCord. The first deposited $10 bail, which he stated he would forfeit as he was on his way for a tour of the country. Gray is a rancher of Armona, California, and he had just started on a pleasure trip. He was speeding along Twelfth street, when he was arrested by Policemen Caldwell and Doolan.

Waycott is a chauffeur and had a party of ladies in his machine, whom he was taking from San Francisco to Fruitvale. The ladies in the party accompanied him to the police station, and they were loud in their denunciation of the speed law. One of the party stated that the machine was not going at an excessive rate of speed, and she termed the arrest as "graft" on the part of the local police. All five ladies will appear in Department two of the police court Monday morning in Waycott's behalf.

BANKER MAY BE ON SHIP

Chicago Defaulter Said to Have Been Seen in Galveston.

GALVESTON, Texas, Aug. 11.—A man answering the description of Stensland, the Chicago bank fugitive, sailed from here today on a Mallory steamer for New York. He gave the name of A. Laurie of New Orleans and was accompanied by a woman claiming to be his wife. The reservation for this steamer was wired to the local Mallory offices from New Orleans two days ago. The boat company believes that the pair took passage to New York, thinking that the boat would touch at Key West. The man denied himself to all and kept aloof from his fellow passengers until after the boat sailed.

GERMANS JEALOUS

Believe Uncle Sam Will Gobble Their Brazilian Trade.

BERLIN, Aug. 11.—Germany is smarting under Secretary Root's successes in South America. Under such titles as "The American Peril in Brazil" and "Pan-American Tricks," belligerent articles bearing the hallmark of government inspiration are appearing in the German press. They attack the United States for inducing Brazil to grant a preferential tariff reduction of twenty per cent on a variety of American products.

The articles urge Germany to counteract this move, which is asserted to be the first step in the annihilation of the Kaiser's trade in Brazil. It is suggested that Germany can offer Brazil two attractive concessions in return for a preferential tariff—namely, increased consumption of coffee and increased emigration.

INVASION OF JAPANESE.

It is asserted that numbers of Japanese are settling in Brazil as the pioneers of a Japanese commercial invasion. The fatherland, therefore, would soon be confronted by the deadly rivalry of both the United States and Japan. The Kaiser is advised to exhaust all the means at his command to preserve Germany's threatened interest, before the "extraordinarily clever diplomacy of the United States, which has already removed the old time Brazilian antipathy to North Americans, achieves still greater triumphs."

SHARP COMMENTS.

The Rheinisch-Westfälische Zeitung, the organ of the German industrial party, reprints with caustic comments the Pan-American statement that Prince Buelow authorized July 24. It says: "We hope the unfortunate statement that Germany's interests in South America are exclusively commercial was not really authorized, because we have political interests in Brazil and elsewhere that are constantly violated and which Germany ought to defend with the same fearlessness as it would defend its interests in the case of a weak state."

BABY BALLOONIST SCORNS PARACHUTE

SARATOGA, Aug. 11.—Two-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William Moore of New York enjoys the unique distinction of having made an aerial flight without the incubance of an airship. The family arrived here on Wednesday and stopped at the Wheeler cottage, 550 Broadway. The happy-faced youngster was playing with an inflated crimson-colored toy balloon in a room on the third story, in which was his mother. The child's center of gravity was pivoted on the dancing and capering toy, which the juvenile balloonist held by a string.

Finally the child unintentionally relaxed his grasp of the cord, and the balloon, swiftly guided by the cooling afternoon zephyrs, sailed out through an open window and disappeared. With a shriek of despair over his sudden and unexpected loss the young innocent rushed to the window and plunged headforemost outward. He fell a distance of twenty-five feet to the ground, striking on his hands and knees. Winding her child vanished and fearing the possibility of fatal results the distracted mother uttered shrieks as she rushed downstairs. As the child's descent had been witnessed by several a commotion followed.

The manly little enthusiast had raised himself to his feet and was toddling back to the house before anyone could reach him. Dr. John F. Humphrey, who was promptly on the scene, was surprised to find that the Moore two-year-old was uninjured save for a few scratches on his knees. An hour later the child was again at play.

GREET LOVED ONES.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., Aug. 11.—Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth reached Oyster Bay at 8.15 this evening on board the Sylph, which took them from the steamship St. Paul at 5 p. m. President and Mrs. Roosevelt and all the members of the family were on the T. West Roosevelt pier to welcome the travelers when they were towed in by the Sylph's launch. After an affectionate greeting all around, the members of the reunited family were driven to Sagamore Hill.

Primaries Will Be Held on Next Tuesday

SAN FRANCISCO, August 11.—On Tuesday we are to have the primaries, and on Wednesday it should be as plain as the nose of a dog who is to be the next Republican nominee for Governor of California. As for myself I have been reluctantly convinced that that nominee will not be Governor George C. Pardee, no matter how well he may have deserved a renomination and re-election.

There are a good many of us who seem to see a sort of fatuity in the conduct of the Governor's campaign. I have never understood why he did not go into San Francisco and Los Angeles and put up a contest for every assembly district delegation. He certainly would have won some of those contests. As it is I doubt very much whether he will secure nine of the 159 delegates from San Francisco or more than twelve of the 129 from Los Angeles. It looks as if he was going to let Fresno go by the board, and as if he had made no great effort to capture the works in many of the smaller counties where his friends among the people might very easily have prevailed.

I have been trying to account in my own mind for this seeming lack of activity among the Governor's friends, but have had no solution of the problem until it was suggested by one of the wise machine managers, who winked an eye and said:

"Can't you see that the 'Organization' has deluded the Governor and Charlie Spear into thinking that Pardee would be taken up as Herrin's man in the convention?"

There may be something in this theory. It certainly seems to be the most logical explanation of the way the Governor has seemed to let his fight go at loose ends. Perhaps Charles Spear was thoroughly fooled in the matter. Some of his political friends and associates may have been entirely too wise for him. He may have thought that he had been doing so much politics with the "Organization" that that body was bound to support the Governor in the convention. But I can tell him and the Governor, if they have not long ago found it out, that the "Organization" intends to nominate J. N. Gillett of Humboldt, and I believe they have the votes to turn the trick.

The day the Governor refused to renominate Colonel John C. Kirkpatrick as harbor commissioner, he lost the support of William F. Herrin and the "Organization," and no matter what else he might do for the Southern Pacific he had committed the unpardonable sin. For John C. Kirkpatrick is the closest individual friend that William F. Herrin has.

Kirkpatrick is a very brilliant man. He took a ranch in the San Joaquin that had been running the Sharons into debt for a long time and he made it pay very handsomely. Then they put him in charge of the Palace hotel, which had been a white elephant on the hands of the estate, and though he had no experience in the hotel business, he soon made the Palace pay like a mint.

One story is characteristic of his management. He found that the man in charge of the dishes had been allowed $20 a day for breakage. He made up his mind that $600 a month was altogether an extravagant allowance for broken crockery. So he sent for the man, and told him that he did not care to cut down his allowance, but he wished him to bring to the manager's office every night all the dishes broken during the day. The immediate consequence was that the breakage account dropped to $6 a day, and with a similar business treatment of the entire situation the property that never had paid was made one of the finest business institutions in all the west.

In his association with the Sharon properties Kirkpatrick was brought into contact with Herrin, who is one of the attorneys for the Sharon interests. And as he is a very engaging story teller and one of the pleasantest of table companions, the lawyer and the manager got into the way of being together a great deal at the table and of forming a genuine affection one for the other. Consequently when Pardee refused to reappoint Kirkpatrick, Herrin walked up and down his office rubbing his hands, and as he rubbed them he rubbed into his heart an animosity that was to remain there as long as Pardee was a figure in political life.

So if Pardee thought that Ruef was doing any politics for him in San Francisco, or that Walter Parker was helping him in Los Angeles, or that Johnny Mackenzie would turn him a trick in Santa Clara, or that Charlie Curry or Jim Gillis really would be for him in Sacramento, or that Joe Knowland would give him an enthusiastic support in Alameda he certainly made the mistake of his life, and though I see he is quoted as saying that he is likely to be nominated on the first ballot, I honestly fear he is not going to have a look-in.

Now all this might have been changed if it were not for the disaster that overtook the bay counties. That disaster was so tremendous that people ceased to bother with politics and let the regular politicians have everything their own way. If the general public had taken its usual interest in the election very probably Pardee could have won out in spite of the "Organization," for the majority of the people are convinced that he has made a good governor—the best and most independent governor that we have had in many a long year. But when the people had something besides politics to talk about the politicians stepped in and got delegation after delegation before the masses realized what was going on. Even then those masses took a languid interest in affairs political, because Pardee is anything but what the Democrats of the south call a "rabble rouser." So it has not been a very hard task for the politicians, who keep putting up schemes all the year round, to programme the delegations against a man who is really a popular favorite.

All this talk about the possible nomination of Henry T. Gage by the Republican convention is the wildest rot. There is no intention anywhere along the line to nominate Gage, and if there were any such intention on the part of Herrin it would be the surest means for renominating Pardee. Many of the counties that have taken program this year on Gillett never would think of accepting Gage; and if there were an effort at this late day to switch the shouting followers of Gillett it would result in the meanest kind of a failure. Of course Ruef could deliver his goods, and Walter Parker could deliver some of his, but all the machine-made delegations in the state could not be handed over in any such fashion as the dreamers think.

As a matter of fact politics is not such a complicated or mysterious game. In most of its aspects men do not succeed in politics by being mystics. The great bosses are always men who tell the truth or else do not speak at all. So it is the amateurs who are going up and down continually nosing out these great mysterious intentions to overturn the expected order of things and to make great strokes of state policy on the most unexpected occasions.

The intention to nominate Gillett for governor has been perfectly plain for a long time. Anyone who has been taken into the confidences of the big manipulators knows that this is true. If you will take notice of the men who are making Gillett's fight up and down the state and ascertain who they are reporting to you will see plainly enough the intentions of the machine.

Of course, Warren Porter, who is a machine man, has been making a hopeful fight in the coast counties. But I do not think he has been very much fooled with the idea he was to be made the machine candidate. His one great political purpose in life is to compass the downfall of Pardee, and if he can accomplish that purpose he will be thoroughly content to eat a little dish of crow when he finds that the nomination is not to be for him. He was simply one of the smaller pieces in the chess game, moved boldly forward on one part of the board to accomplish a certain result. He has been more or less successful in accomplishing that result, and now he will be sacrificed or withdrawn.

As for Hayes, he may think that he is still considered as a gubernatorial possibility, but I know that he never has been so considered. I do not know what his arrangements with Ruef may be, but no one outside of Ruef regards him as even an extreme possibility. There is a notion among the practical politicians that if Hayes were nominated he would be charged with blasphemy, because of some of his utterances in the pulpit at Edendale and his subsequent dealings with gamblers and the push in San Jose politics. He seems, however, to be desirous of keeping in touch with the machine, and he has kept up relations with Herrin from his first entry into politics in California. I do not believe, however, that he is anywhere regarded as available timber for the governorship.

Tuesday is going to tell the tale in the fights in the San Francisco districts, but it is probable that Ruef will not lose more than two or three of them. Perhaps he may win them all, and even should he lose in all the contested districts he will still control the great majority of the delegates; and even the contesting leaders do not intend to give Governor Pardee more than a small handful of their votes. It seems to me the Governor should have contested in every district here and every district in Los Angeles. But I am not one of his political advisers, though I would be very glad to know that my predictions of his defeat would prove untrue.

Charges of extravagance were made against Shea and other officials at the latter convention. Salaries and expense accounts were discussed and declared exorbitant.

California to Lose Mr. Dingee.

In announcing that William J. Dingee will make his future home in New York city, one of THE TRIBUNE'S special correspondents in San Francisco speaks in praise of Mr. Dingee's achievements in finance and industrial development. The list given is meager compared with the facts and the encomiums far less ardent than Mr. Dingee's performances justify.

Fortunately, Mr. Dingee will still retain large interests on the Pacific Coast and thus remain identified with the section in which he made his fortune and has risen to be such a commanding figure in financial operations, nevertheless his departure for the East is a distinct and heavy loss to California. He is the type of a man who not only succeeds himself, but makes states and communities succeed. He possesses precisely the qualities most needed in growing and undeveloped communities. He not only possesses energy, enterprise and persistence, but his boldness, liberality, and foresight equip him for a leadership that only needs a following to achieve marvelous results.

Mr. Dingee picked up the sickly and tentative slate industry, developed it, created a steady demand for slate roofing and placed the production of slate on a firm and flourishing basis. He has done more than all other men to establish and develop the cement industry on the Pacific Coast. He was a leader in developing the salt industry. His genius is constructive and improving, and is spurred to higher achievement by successful accomplishment. Nor is it deterred by unexpected obstacles or cast down by temporary reverse. He is as quick to seize opportunity as he is to perceive the potentiality of undeveloped resources.

It is to be regretted that Mr. Dingee did not remain in Oakland. Had he been better understood and more warmly seconded in his efforts and his views, Oakland would today present a different aspect from what it does. We should now possess splendid hotels, noble public buildings, parks, and recreation grounds, and a far greater industrial and commercial importance than we can boast of. To him we owe mainly the erection of the first modern first-class theater erected in this city. His liberal spirit and pride in municipal adornment were displayed in the remodeling of the present office building of the Contra Costa Water Company, which is one of the handsomest structures of its kind to be found anywhere. The money spent on this building did not increase the company's income a penny, but it greatly improved the appearance of lower Broadway and gave dignity to the city.

Mr. Dingee's taste for adornment and for constructing things useful and beautiful is manifest in everything he does, and is indulged regardless of expense. He is a liberal patron of art, and while he never races he keeps and breeds thoroughbred horses. His gardens, pastures and greenhouses are not excelled in the State. The more money he makes the more he builds, beautifies and adorns. His restless activity is directed to developing something and enriching the social organization in which he is placed.

While Mr. Dingee is a successful money maker, he has never hoarded money nor cared for wealth for its own sake. He is prodigal in charity and public spirit and generous to a fault in his dealings. To his friends his heart and his purse are alike open. After he is gone from among us, the people of Oakland and San Francisco will more fully realize his splendid qualities and his value as a builder and developer.

Oakland's Real Estate Activity.

These days, the reports of the activity in real estate in Oakland constitute good and inspiring reading. It is many years since the city has witnessed so much activity, uninfluenced by those artificial processes which are so well known to professional boosters. Activity in real estate of the latter kind is always unhealthy, and it never fails to lead to final trouble and distress. Artificial booms, such as Los Angeles has from time to time fostered, are not desirable. This community has been fortunate in not being the victim of any of them, for when a boom collapses, the harm which is done exceeds enormously the good which it did when in full swing.

Oakland's activity in real estate is based on genuine progress and the natural effects of an increased and steadily increasing population, with which those who have rentable properties are finding difficulty to keep abreast. Oakland is, indeed, passing through a new and important stage in its development, and is entering upon that career as a manufacturing and commercial center which has always been assumed by the more progressive and far-sighted of its citizens to be its rightful inheritance and its final destiny. Material changes are, therefore, taking place in many parts of the city—changes that are, indeed, altering the character of large areas. Sections of the city which have heretofore been devoted almost exclusively to residence purposes have been invaded within the past three months by commerce and the house dwellers are being driven out to be succeeded by those who need the location for the more strenuous activities of life. Naturally property values are going up; but Oakland property today, whether needed for residence or for business, is cheap, and the man or woman who invests in it is giving evidence of wisdom, providing, of course, proper discretion is used in the selection of the locality in which property is purchased.

In Connecticut property-owners are meeting the higher rate of fire insurance established by the insurance companies to cover their San Francisco losses by uniting on the policy of carrying a smaller amount of insurance as an offset. The policy adopted by the insurance companies is really like a two-edged sword—it cuts both ways.

What a windfall it would have been to professional alienists if the Thaws had stuck to the insanity plea of defense! Every insanity expert in the country would have made a bid to get a share of the Thaw fortune. The repudiation of the idea that Thaw was crazy when he murdered White shatters the hopes of the professionals, but it prevents a big raid on the family treasury.

The workers in every branch of trade in San Francisco are demanding higher pay. This is the natural sequence of the organization of trusts to boost up the prices of everything used in the rebuilding of the city.

August is evidently making a name for itself in these parts equal to that made by July, which, according to the Weather Bureau, was the coldest July ever experienced in San Francisco, so far as the records of the Bureau show.

Persia's Peaceful Revolution.

Persia is about the last of the countries in which autocratic authority exists where the civilized world would expect to learn that a constitutional government had been proclaimed. The announcement that a national assembly is to be summoned to take a part in the government of the country, as a measure to insure "the extension of national tranquility, for the welfare of Persia and all its inhabitants and in order to fortify the government," is, indeed, a genuine surprise, as the possibility of such a radical change at this time was not even suspected. It will devolve upon this national assembly when convened to frame a durable constitution for the country.

This is, in fact, one of the most remarkable political transformations of modern times, for the Shah of Persia has been, up to the present time, a despot in the fullest sense of the word. His will, whenever expressed, whether it affected life or property, has been the supreme law of the land, and he has been regarded hitherto as the least likely of any reigning monarch to surrender any of his prerogatives or to invite his subjects to participate in any form in the affairs of state. In summoning a national assembly he is divesting himself of the authority he possessed over the lives and property of his subjects and stripping his deputies, the governors of provinces and districts of the same powers which they have hitherto enjoyed subject only to his revision. The passing of Persian despotism means the relief of the working and mercantile classes from the oppression to which they have hitherto been subject and opens a new era of peace and prosperity to a country which has been much disturbed by court intrigues and popular disorders. These have been, of course, the natural fruits of the centralization of all authority in one man.

Until lately, the central government of Persia consisted of a Grand Vizier with various dependent officials who merely executed the will of the Shah. Lately a ministry was organized, nominally modeled after the cabinets of European states; but it possessed no original authority. That remained undisturbed in the person of the Shah. A week ago, a new Grand Vizier was appointed. This officer possesses evidently progressive ideas and exercises a beneficent influence over the Shah, or he would never have succeeded in persuading him to make the concession to his subjects that he has done. According to the telegraphic information received by the Persian minister at Washington, the national assembly will be composed of princes of the blood, representatives of the clergy, chief of the reigning dynasty, high dignitaries and personages, merchants and representatives of corporations. The assembly will meet at Teheran. It is provided that all civil and constitutional laws shall originate in the assembly and after the signature of the Shah will become effective. While the assembly will not be, strictly speaking, a representative body of all the people, as it is evident from the foregoing outline of its personnel that only the wealthier classes will be entitled to seats in it, its organization is a long stride toward the establishment in Persia of a truly popular form of government in which all classes will be ultimately represented and one in which the reigning monarch will be merely a figurehead. Anyhow, despotic government may be said to have departed from Persia forever. Aside from the effect which the change will produce on the Persian people, it will doubtless be the means of putting an end to the intrigues of other ambitious and aggressive nations through the activity of their agents at the court of Teheran to shape the country's policies and destiny to suit their own ends. At all events, it guarantees the integrity of Persia against the encroachments of Russia and puts an effective stop to any designs she may be still cherishing to establish herself on the Persian gulf.

HOLD TO THE GOOD.

All signs point to the nomination and re-election of Governor George C. Pardee. As the political atmosphere clears, the name of the State's executive stands forth more distinctly, and unless some unforeseen condition arises, it will be the people's good fortune to have four years more of the present executive's able administration.

"Prove all things; hold fast to that which is good," is one of those wise and ever-applicable injunctions of the great apostle. It is a practical rule of conduct that may be followed with profit in all the affairs of life. It appeals to every citizen who wishes to see clearly and to think clearly because it is so obviously sensible and wise. Whether in business or politics, it is a safe and sane rule of conduct.

There can be no better exhortation to the voters of the State in the present gubernatorial campaign, when they are called upon to send delegates to nominate a candidate for Governor. The record of Governor Pardee is an open book, known and read of all men that have eyes to see. It is a record of proved efficiency and worth. Let the voters look at it fairly and honestly. "Prove" it; that is, let them satisfy themselves as to its true quality, and then "hold fast to that which is good."

The administration of Governor Pardee has been a success in every sense of the word. There has been no single instance of scandal connected with his administration, and this fact alone must appeal forcibly to those who are acquainted with the history of previous executives. He has surrounded himself with clean and able men, and in the matter of appointments honest and capable men have been the rule rather, as so often shown in past administrations, the rare exception. Himself a patient, tireless, and indefatigable worker, he has been an inspiration to officials in every department, and the result has been a general rise in the standard of state service.

Governor Pardee's conduct in office has been eminently fair, and always in the interest of the whole people. He has given California an administration entirely free from corporate or other hurtful influences, and has made a good Governor in the best sense of the term. There is abundance of evidence that the Southern Pacific and machine agencies generally are opposing the renomination of Governor Pardee. That fact alone should rally the people to his standard.

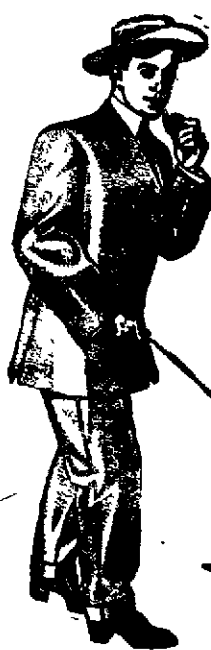

The Republican party of California cannot afford, in view of these facts, to fail to renominate George C. Pardee.—Los Angeles Express.

The recent activity of the street department in cleaning, repairing, and watering the streets in the business district south of Seventh street and east of Webster, is producing good results. The latter were certainly needed, and the department did not wake up a minute too soon, for the traffic in that part of the city has grown to enormous proportions and the streets there need much more attention now than they have obtained at any time in the past.

GEM OF SPANISH MASTER DISCOVERED

PARIS, Aug. 11.—Art experts have for many years known of the existence of a magnificent picture by Murillo, representing the Holy Family, with two of the evangelists, but all efforts to discover its whereabouts have failed.

The gem of the Spanish master has now just been discovered in an English family in Constantinople which has been settled here for about 100 years, and which did not know of the value of the picture.

The curator of the Louvre, who has examined the work, guarantees the work, estimates its value at $200,000, and states that France is willing to negotiate for its purchase.

The owner, however, who thinks he can perhaps do better in London, has left with his treasure for that capital.

MAY RECONCILE RIVAL UNIONS

Efforts Being Made to Unite Jarring Faction of Teamsters.

CHICAGO, Aug. 11.—There is a possibility—just a bare one—that the teamsters' international strife may be settled, and all the members brought back into one brotherhood. If this is accomplished it would be due to the efforts of the representatives of President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor.

Neither side would give out any definite details, but it is understood that the shot brotherhood said they would receive back the bolters, provided the truculent delegates from New York would agree to pay up their back dues and conform to the constitution. When this word was first conveyed to the new unions it is understood that the proposition was turned down with great promptness, and the assertion was once more made that Shea must step out of the presidency, and things would stand as they were.

One of the interesting literary attempts in prospect is to be made under the patronage of the Spinners' Club, who are about to issue an interesting little book under the title of "The Spinners' Book," and containing short stories and poems by some of our best writers, among whom is numbered Gertrude Atherton, Charles Warren Stoddard, Mary Austin, Charles Keeler, William Keith, John Muir and Margaret Cameron. The proceeds of the book are to be placed in the fund which the Spinners are raising as a recognition of the ability and personality of the well known literary woman, Miss Ina Coolbrith, who suffered such serious loss through the fire. Prominent men and women of the coast have already subscribed generously toward the undertaking, and an appeal is to be made to the women's clubs throughout the United States. Miss Eleanor Davenport of Pacific avenue is custodian of the fund, and with the president, Mrs. Mark Gerstle, and the secretary, Miss Carol Day, is pushing the work enthusiastically. Miss Coolbrith will be the guest of Mrs. Millie Scott Biven for a few days this week.

WHAT DID YOU DO?

THE STORY OF THE GIRL WHO FAINTED WHEN SHE HEARD THE VALUE OF HER "RED TOP." OTHER PEOPLE HAVE HAD A CHANCE TO FAINT DURING THE PAST FEW WEEKS AND SOME OF THEM DID.

Now, the market for the past two weeks has made some people faint, particularly those "short" of it, for nobody knows where it will stop. I bought 2000 shares of Bt. Ives for a customer at 42c on August 2; five days later closed the account at 55c. The customer made over $1000. A few weeks ago at $1.50? Look at the price today and figure the amount you could have made. I put customers into Btch below 40c.

Now, there are a lot of other stocks that are a good buy. Watch Goldfield Mining, Seiler Humphrey, Montana Bull-Frog, Red Top Extension. There are other stocks that I think well of, but watch these for a month or so and then figure out from present prices how much you could have made on the investment of $200.

I am not a miner nor a mine owner—just a stock broker with a reliable correspondent in all Nevada camps. For nearly twenty years was a newspaper reporter and editor, for the past seven years Sunday editor of the Call. After the "shake-up" made a trip through the Nevada camps, got into a business way with many of the best people up there and whom I had already known as a newspaper man.

On my return from Nevada I became a member of the Stock and Bond Exchange. I began with desk room at 1070 Broadway. I was only there one month and now I have rooms 29-30, Bacon block. Now, doesn't that tell the story?

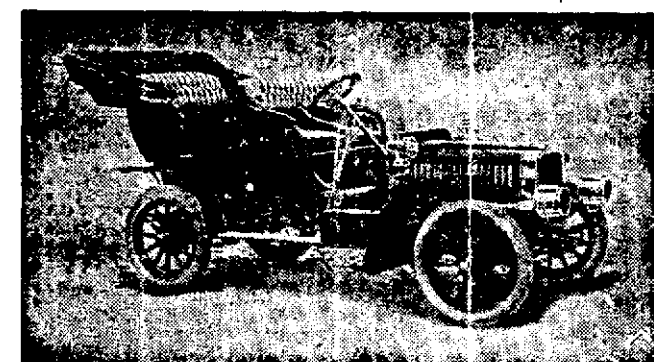

I put out a lot of Fairview Southend, an unlisted security which is making good.

Let me tell you about something else that is good. About two years ago Nellie Walsh, a trained nurse in Goldfield, invested $50 in "Red Top" Mining Company at 4c per share. She put the stock away and paid no attention to the market until a few months ago. Needing some ready cash she visited a broker and asked if she could sell 2000 shares of "Red Top" and at what price. When the broker told her that it was worth 32c per share and offered her a check for $6400, Miss Walsh, contrary to all rules of a trained nurse, fainted.

HOW IS YOUR TRUNK?

Have you a trunk?

Have you a good trunk?

These questions sound like the first grade primer of long ago. But when we used primers there were no such trunks as Osgoods' are selling today.

The trunks of those days—well we know all about them. They were good for one journey, sometimes two, but hardly ever for three.

Osgoods' trunks are good for a lifetime. The Grand Amalgamated Union of Ruggage Smashers have ceased trying to revenge themselves on Osgoods' trunks. They have found out it is of no use.

Osgoods' trunks can be blown to pieces with dynamite, but the use of that is against the regulations. Train wrecks have no effect on them and it is on record that out of one hundred and seventy one trunks that were in a recent collision, the only two that were not smashed had been bought at Osgoods' and belonged to an Elk who recently went to Den er.

That's a pretty good record for trunks. Now to be a little more specific.

Have you heard of Osgoods' seven-dollar trunks?

Have you heard of other dealers' $12 trunk?

Well they are the same, the only difference being that when you buy at Osgoods' you save the five spot.

And if you want any kind of a trunk or a suit case or a valise or a grip—and you want the best-looking, the toughest, the most convenient and the most reasonably-priced on earth—you'll find them at Osgoods'.

We are acknowledged to be the "real thing," the "it" the "great Mogul," the "goods"—in all things pertaining to trunks.

OSGOOD'S DRUGGERIES

—There are two of them in Oakland and everybody knows it. They carry everything that is usually found in a first-class druggery—and a whole lot more.

Do you want pure drugs?
Do you want reliable proprietary medicines?
Do you want to protect your infant's life?
Do you want perfect rubber goods?
Do you want the purest of medicinal whiskey and wine?

—You will find them at Osgoods'.

THOSE CIGARAGES

They are known all over the town as the places where all 12½¢—no matter what the brand—are sold for 10¢. And there is no chance to gamble because they're legitimate Cigarages. They are patronized largely by ladies.

Yet we sell cigars cheaper than any other house in town.

Why? Because our business is not a get-rich-quick concern. It is a legitimate business and we are content with a reasonable profit.

CROPS EXCEED ALL RECORDS

Government Report Cheers Wall Street Into Hope of Greater Prosperity.

NEW YORK Aug 11.—The Wall Street attitude at the close of the week once more brings into question the two sides of the market position that have so often, during the past year, stood against each other in sharp contrast. On the one hand everything relating to the general business outlook as in the highest degree favorable.

After yesterday's government report there can be no doubt that the crops of wheat and corn will exceed all previous records and last week's official estimates on cotton showed that it is in excellent shape. With an extraordinary outturn assured, it is quoted as certain that the high prices at which staple products have been selling for the last few years will be maintained.

The reason for this lies in the reduced state of reserve supplies throughout the world and in the shortage of the principal foreign harvests. Looking ahead to what all this means for the general business prosperity of the country, there is scarcely a question that it points to prosperity continuing on a scale equal if not greater than anything heretofore realized. The iron cotton and wool markets are also in splendid shape for the producer.

This is the one side of the Wall Street picture. The other is the uncertainty of what is vaguely called the autumn money problem, the recurrence of which each year begins about this time to call a halt on financial operations.

It is true that the position of the banks is a good deal stronger than it was two months ago, but it is also true that local bank reserves are below the average and measuring the present money surplus against the heavy withdrawals which the interior banks will make during the next four months, the ability to meet these demands successfully appears more serious.

RISE IN CALL MONEY.

The rise in call money to five per cent this week and the stiffening of time loans so that as high as six per cent is exacted for six months accommodation, represent the difficulties of the situation. In order to obtain the requisite aid from outside money supplies, rates must work higher even than they are and must be maintained at the higher level.

A speculation for the rise in the stock market has been well based it may be on hopes of increased dividends can scarcely look attractive with this prospect in view. Nor can much activity be expected from investment capital when the rate on money interest for a long period promises to considerably exceed the return on securities. The flatness of the investment market, of which there has recently been much evidence, is, of course, due wholly to this expectation of higher money.

LINE DRAWN.

As the week ends the line of distinction between these two aspects of the financial situation is very sharply drawn. To some minds the exceptional crop outlook with the certainty that it contains another reason of business prosperity appeals the more strongly. To other minds the cramped money condition and the investment apathy seem to be more important matters. The division of sentiment along these lines has not wholly checked the upward tendency of the previous week. But the vigorous forward movement of prices has halted and as seems likely, greater irregularity and less general activity will characterize the stock exchange dealings for the immediate future.

INSIST ON RESTING ONE DAY A WEEK

LONDON Aug 11.—The bill passed by the French legislature enforcing a compulsory weekly holiday for French employees is curiously interesting. When it is possible the rest is to be given on Sundays, but in the case of restaurants, cafes, hospitals and newspapers where work cannot be suspended the rest is to be granted on another day.

The recommendation came from the labor committee and after a very short debate was accepted by 575 votes to 1. It is curious to note how this law of rest has been almost universal although called under various names. The Canadian parliament has just passed a Sabbath observance bill and the title of this measure is an interesting survival of the confusion between the Sabbath and the Sunday which only arose in England with the birth of Puritanism.

Sunday before then always meant the first day of the week. Saturday still means the Sabbath as it actually does now in French and Italian—Samedi and Sabato.

Constantine in his decree of 321 calls Sunday the venerable day of the sun and orders that magistrates and people residing in the city should rest and all workshops be closed. During Puritan times the reversion to Sabbatharianism was so great that one of the accusations brought against Archbishop Laud was that he held that Sunday was no Sabbath.

The variations regarding the law of Sunday throughout the reigns of the different kings of England mark the ebb and flow of popular opinion. Sunday rest was insisted on from Alfred onward. Richard II forbade games and sports but allowed the practice of archery and Luther protested against turning Sunday into the Jewish Sabbath saying "I order you rather to work on it to ride on it to dance on it, to feast on it."

The Yellow Fever Germ has recently been discovered. It bears a close resemblance to the malaria germ. To free the system from disease germs the most effective remedy is Dr. King's New Life Pills. Guaranteed to cure all diseases due to malaria, poison and constipation. Twenty-five cents, at Osgood Bros' drug stores, Seventh and Broadway and Twelfth and Washington streets.

WEBER'S HEALTH GROWS BETTER

Warden Now Believes He Will Live Until the Day of Execution.

SACRAMENTO Aug 11.—When Adolph Weber the wholesale murderer, sentenced to be hanged on September 12 was removed to Folsom from Auburn a few weeks ago, his health was in such a precarious state that it was considered improbable that he would live until the date set for his execution.

Warden Fell says that he is very much better now and that although he was unable to take any nourishment except milk, he eats heartily and looks very much better.

The warden says that his prisoner will certainly live until September 12th unless he succeeds in killing himself of which there is very little chance as he is carefully watched.

ASKS POLICE TO FIND HIS MISSING SON

Mayor Mott has received a letter from William Rutledge of 125 Morehampton Road, Donnybrook County Dublin, Ireland asking him to locate the twenty-year-old son of the writer, Albert Ernest Rutledge, who is said to be a sailor on one of the coast vessels sailing between California and Alaska.

Rutledge says that his son corresponded regularly up until about a month before the great calamity of April 18, and he fears that Albert may have met with foul play.

The missing boy is described as being of dark complexion, with dark hair.

STOLEN GOODS FOUND.

From time to time the management of the Saddle Rock Restaurant missed tablecloths and napkins. A watch was kept on the articles and it was found that the missing articles were in the rooms of Edward Bagge, a former waiter in the place. P. Kieck, the proprietor of the restaurant, instituted search warrant proceedings and the tablecloths and napkins were recovered. The case will be heard Monday in department one of the police courts.

BOUND OVER.

L. B. Carpenter, charged with forgery by Roy Seibert, of the Idora Park management, was held over to the superior court yesterday by Police Judge Smith.

Seibert told of having helped Carpenter out of similar trouble in San Francisco. As a reward for the kindness, Carpenter then gave him a forged check of $80 to cover the amount which he borrowed. The check was drawn on the First National bank and the name of Irvin Peterson, a former employee of Carpenter, was forged to it.

Three Kinds of Glasses

For a hundred years opticians have tried to produce a single lens equally satisfactory for far or near work. The innumerable varieties may be grouped into

1. SOLID BI-FOCAL. One of the earliest and least expensive to make. The upper portion of the lens is ground thin for distance, leaving the lower portion thicker and therefore stronger for reading. WHILE simple in construction and very cheap this lens ALWAYS IN THE END, injures the eyes.

2. CEMENT BI-FOCAL. The regular double vision glass, made by cementing an extra piece to the bottom of the upper lens. We have made many thousands of them and they give satisfaction, but the unsightly seam across them produces the appearance of infirmity or age and the lower pieces sometimes fall off. It must be admitted that many eyes cannot tolerate them and to some they work injury. They are low in price, $2.50 to $5.00 per pair.

3. KRYPTOK. This lens solves all difficulties. The additional reading glass is inserted WITHIN the upper lens, so skillfully as to be unnoticeable. No seams or lines across the glass and perfect vision is obtained for far or near work.

INCORPORATION OF FRUITVALE

Citizens Consider Change of Government for Thriving
Suburb.

MELROSE, Aug. 12.—At the last meeting of the Melrose Improvement Club, held in the Melrose school, the subject of incorporation was discussed. Attorney T. C. Jenkins outlined the legal requirements, and mode of procedure for incorporating, as well as the conduct of a town government. G. A. Taylor, E. A. Freeman and Charles Jeffers favored the incorporation of the city of Fruitvale, to extend from the eastern line of Oakland to Seminary avenue. The matter was left undecided.

Two plans for a building for the Union High School No. 4 were considered. One for a reinforced concrete structure, to cost $110,000, the other for a wooden building to cost $80,000. Resolutions were adopted in favor of the concrete building. A site has already been bought, and it is likely that the new school will be built soon.

ARMOURS DECIDE ON MINNEAPOLIS

ST. PAUL, Minn., Aug. 11.—It was unofficially announced here today by two representatives of the Armour packing interests that the new plant that had been decided upon either for South St. Paul, where Swift & Co. have a large plant, or at New Brighton, a site nearer Minneapolis than St. Paul, would be erected at New Brighton. It is believed this would mean the eventual removal of the Swift plant from South St. Paul to New Brighton, making one large cattle market for the northwest.

CHICAGO HAS DANGEROUS FIRE

CHICAGO, Aug. 11.—A fire this afternoon which started in a grocery at 2380 Archer avenue, spread rapidly and before the firemen gained control of the flames they had consumed five two-story buildings, entailing a loss estimated at $12,000, and rendering ten families homeless. The origin of the fire is unknown.

FARM PHONE SAVES GIRL IN A RUNAWAY

OSKALOOSA, Ia., Aug. 12.—Having saved his two-year-old girl from a frightful death in a runaway by using a telephone, Tunis Wanverdeak, a wealthy Scott county farmer, dropped on his knees and fervently thanked God for the wonderful invention.

Wanverdeak was about to leave for town. His little girl was already seated in the carriage. As the father turned for an instant to speak to his wife, the team made a sudden dash down the road.

Almost paralyzed with fear, Wanverdeak managed to think of the telephone. Hurrying to the house, he phoned to E. Klaerson, one mile distant, to save his little girl.

Klaerson and his hired man stopped the team and lifted the little girl from the carriage, frightened, but unhurt.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 12.—The most expensive hat on record came out in the charity sale given here by society women.

It was drawn by Robert Goelet, who declined to say how many shares he had, but he bought of his neighbor, Mrs. Goelet, who was formerly Miss Elsie Wheeler of Philadelphia. She will add it to her collection of exquisite millinery, which he is not much in use this season, as she is ill and does not go out a great deal.

The prize was a white leghorn hat trimmed with white chiffon and a wealth of pink roses. Some of the women who coveted it called it a dream.

General Horace Porter, former ambassador to France, won a beautiful silver jewelry box.

PORKERS ROOT FOR OLD RELICS

MILAN, Aug. 12.—Truffle hunters of Italy have for years employed pigs in their search for that delicacy, and from the same breed has developed the archaeological hog, which has more than human sense in finding relics.

In hunting truffles the pig's sense of smell is developed to such a high degree that it can detect the root buried deep in the ground.

Observing several spectacular scientific grubbing around some ruins, a laborer conceived the idea of training his pigs to find ancient prizes. Taking old vases and carvings, he buried them, and after ten months' persistent work trained the pigs so highly that it is said they can locate Roman coins at a depth of 10 feet.

These pigs are real enthusiasts, and differentiate between the various eras with keen judgment. Where they will root in a half-hearted manner for some example of the time of Nero they grow highly excited and nervous in unearthing a jar of the Augustan age.

HEIRESS TO FORTUNE REMAINS HOUSEMAID

DUBUQUE, Aug. 12.—Heiress to a fortune of $38,000 as a result of her grandmother's will, Hattie Clausen, a maid in the employ of the Baker family in Tenth street, absolutely refuses to quit work. And, mind you, this is not a prospective fortune, for Hattie has the actual cash in hand.

Two years ago, the time of her grandmother's death, Miss Clausen was notified that she was named as the sole heir to her grandmother's estate. The young girl continued her work in Dubuque, and just now, upon attaining her majority, has come into actual possession of her thousands.

Miss Clausen is continuing her work as domestic at the Baker home.

"I have not made up my mind what shall do with the money," she said, who asked as to her future plans. "I shall wait all probability, continue at my work until later. The money has been left to me by my grandmother, Mrs. Hyman of Seattle, Wash., who died two years ago, never lived with her, but it is evident she thought a great deal of me."

Dr. Agnew of San Francisco, now 2233 California. Recital diseases. Ph. Oakland 5213.

GIVES BIG TRUST DEED

Southern California Railroad Is Pledged to Bankers for

SAN DIEGO, Aug. 11.—By trust deed filed today by E. S. Babcock, president of the Los Angeles and San Diego, the property was today conveyed to the Los Angeles Trust company, J. C. Drake, president, to secure the payment of $706,000 of forty-year first mortgage gold bonds. It is stated that the money raised is to be used for the purpose of extending the road in San Diego, Orange and Los Angeles counties, presumably to the city of Los Angeles. The company now operates a motor road, which is being electrified from the foot of C street to La Jolla, 15 miles up the coast, and also an electric road on C, Sixth and L streets to a connection with the Cuyamaca railroad, which extends 30 miles eastward to the foothills.

JOLLY WIVES CLUB FORGOT THE "MRS."

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—Mrs. T. Whipple, wife of Dr. John Whipple, a dentist, has filed a bill for divorce which threatens to bring to the public gaze more than one remarkable story of domestic infidelity. Mrs. Whipple charges cruelty.

In a cross bill Dr. Whipple alleges that Mrs. Whipple was a member of a married women's club which took frequent outings at Paw Paw Lake, Mich., and that these pledges governed the club.

"I swear to be a jolly good fellow all the time."

"I shall be known as 'Miss' when out, and I shall address my fellow clubmates as 'Miss'."

"I pledge myself not to exhibit my wedding ring."

"I will never reveal anything about my fellow members."

"I will always stand firm for the girls."

BREEDS PIGS FOR EARLY LEATHER

STERLING, Aug. 12.—If Alexander Cunningham's present experiments prove successful, pigskin leather will soon become so cheap as to make its use universal. Mr. Cunningham is just now trying to breed a porker that will shed its skin annually.

Nothing that several pigs had very loose skins. Cunningham studied Professor Burbank's theories on cross-breeding, and was gratified to find that there was more than one way to skin a pig without converting it into sausage.

Mr. Cunningham has already developed three pigs that shed their skins, but the cattle came on in spots and not in one piece, as was hoped for. Still, he is not discouraged, and believes that within two years he will have a perfect strain.

VICTIM IS BRUISED.

SAN LEANDRO, Aug. 11.—The funeral of aged Manuel A. Marcianeto, who was killed in Linden, N. Y., was held yesterday. Marcianeto was a citizen of Portugal, and was on the way to his daughter in San Leandro. He fell from the train near Linden, and was ground beneath the wheels. His body was brought to San Leandro for burial. The services were held in St. Leandro church, and the remains were interred in the Hayward Catholic cemetery.

PLAN ENTERTAINMENTS.

The local lodge of Good Templars will give an entertainment on Tuesday, August 28th.

The San Leandro Baseball Team will play the Centerville team today, at San Leandro Park.

MOTHER WEEPS FOR DEAD SON

Breaks Down While Giving Deposition in the Mahon Case.

J. Mahon, of Salt Lake City, father of John S. Mahon, who was shot by Mrs. Lola Reed in the dental parlors of Dr. Lu Ella Cool-Walker, at the corner of Washington and Thirteenth streets, last Tuesday night, appeared at Coroner Mehrmann's office to make a deposition regarding the alleged connection of his son with the tragedy.

Mr. Mahon was accompanied by his wife and daughter. It was believed that the deposition of the parent would simply cover the question of the identity of the deceased, because the father was not expected to know what took place in the parlors of Dr. Walker, last Tuesday night, when he was in Salt Lake City, more than a thousand miles away.

IN MOURNING.

The mother and sister of the dead man were attired in mourning. The father was garbed in black. The mother was deeply moved and sought to evade meeting everybody, because she felt that those who approached desired to speak to her about her bereavement.

BECOMES AGITATED.

Soon after the taking of the deposition began before Deputy Coroners Bolen and Harry Puffer, the questions propounded became of such a leading character that the mother of the murdered man became visibly agitated and, at length, seemed to be on the point of collapse.

For the purpose of preventing an increase of the anguish for the mother, the taking of the deposition was continued until today.

AWAY FROM HOME.

The grief of the mother under such circumstances ordinarily may well be imagined, but in this case, it was intensified with mortification because the news of the son's death under questionable conditions, reached the mother when she and her daughter were sojourning with friends at Los Angeles. Mother and daughter came thence to this city, where they were joined by the father and husband, who came from Salt Lake.

SISTER TALKS.

Last evening in conversation with the sister of the dead man, who had come with her mother from Los An-

5597 SMITHS IN CHICAGO'S 2,300,000 SOULS

CHICAGO, Aug. 11.—There are in Chicago 5597 Smiths, 4117 Andersons, 2760 Olsons, 2684 Browns and 1922 Jones, according to the 1906 city directory, the first copy of which was bound today, having been long delayed by the printers' strike. The new book contains 710,000 names, which by using the 1900 census as a ratio, gives the city a population of 2,300,000. There are 3051 pages bound inside the cover, 108 more than last year.

There are but 6600 names connected with saloons, showing a falling off in that line of business since the $1000 license went into effect, of 510 names.

JOINS NAVY, THOUGH MILLIONAIRE'S SON.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 11.—J. Raynor Wells, son of William Storrs Wells, a millionaire resident of New York and Newport, has enlisted in the navy for four years. He has not figured much in society in Newport, preferring to roam about and see the world.

"Apprentice Seaman Wells" is twenty-three years old, and it was not necessary for him to get the permission of his parents to enter the service. They were as much surprised as his friends to learn that he had taken the step. He enlisted a month ago in New York and was transferred to the Newport naval station a week ago.

A few years ago young Wells married Irene Bishop, a chorus girl in a music hall on Broadway. She is still on the stage. Wells is an only son, but he has three sisters, all prominent socially in New York and Newport.

A TRIBUNE reporter asked the lady if she knew where the wife of her brother, who appears as "Anna" in some of the letters found upon Mahon's person after death, was. She replied that she did not know.

The sister also said she did not know if her brother was married, but admitted that she had heard the matter spoken of. She sought to explain this lack of information by declaring that her brother had been away from home for some time, and when asked how long the absence had been she said that it was about two years. She did not know, she said, that her brother had left a letter addressed to his wife "Anna" in which he set forth that he intended to establish his residence in Reno, Nevada, and then seek divorce.

BURNS HANDS FIGHTING FIRE

Brave Nurse Is Seriously Injured While Stopping Conflagration.

While committing a brave act which saved the life of a woman who had recently become a mother and whom she was nursing, Mrs. Mary Clark, a professional nurse, was painfully burned about the hands and arms yesterday. She was treated at the receiving hospital by Dr. E. J. Rice.

Mrs. Clark was heating some water on an alcohol lamp in the home of Mrs. Foster, the mother, at 836 Harrison street, when it overturned and the curtains of the room were ignited. Her hands were burned by the flaming alcohol which flowed over them, but this did not deter her from quickly jerking down the blazing curtains, thereby preventing an extensive conflagration.

This was the forty-eighth birthday of the nurse and she says she celebrated it in a lively manner. After the wounds were dressed at the hospital, Mrs. Clark returned to resume her duties.

LIGHTNING RINGS A CHURCH BELL

PORT JERVIS, N. Y., Aug. 11.—During a heavy storm here recently lightning struck the chimney of the Methodist church and knocked out many bricks. The bolt ran along an iron supporting rod and tore a big hole in the slate roof. It ran along some wires to the belfry and rang the bell. The pastor, the Rev. Wesley Martin, and his wife and daughter, were sitting in the parsonage adjoining the church, and the sexton, J. C. Drake, was in the main auditorium.

All were shocked, but not seriously. Some of the bricks and slate were carried a hundred feet. Temporary repairs were made for Sunday services.

GETS JUDGMENT.

SAN LEANDRO, Aug. 11.—A jury selected by the parties to the suit, Wednesday, decided in favor of A. De Silveira, plaintiff, against J. C. Locedo, for the amount at suit, which was $16.75, and costs. De Silveira began suit on March 10, alleging that Locedo, who is a barber, owed him the sum sued for in payment for labor. Locedo wished to compromise, but the proposal was rejected by the defendant. The costs of suit amount to $21.50.

IRVING JONAS.

Mr. Irving Jonas, the junior member of the Hub Clothing firm, leaves today for a two months' trip throughout the East.

Mr. Jonas is without doubt the youngest clothing merchant in the west, and will spend one month of his time in familiarizing himself with the practical points of clothing manufacture.

When seen by a TRIBUNE reporter last evening Mr. Jonas said: "My trip will be of a purely business nature—a greater portion of my time will be spent in acquainting myself with the various methods of the woolen business, and to perfect arrangements for the purchase of our fabrics from the looms, thereby eliminating the jobbers' profit and affording a selection of materials that, as to weight and patterns, will be especially adapted to the California climate."

"Woolens of our selection will be made up in the foremost factories after the patterns of authoritative designers and will embody distinctive style features."

It is Mr. Jonas' intention to familiarize himself with the methods of the leading retail clothing establishments in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and Baltimore.

While in New York Mr. Jonas will examine the holiday lines, and promises to be the first one to show Christmas goods in Oakland.

Monday evening the employees of the Hub tendered Mr. Jonas a farewell banquet. Two large autos were obtained, and the party driven to the Piedmont Club House, where tables were set in the large banquet room. The dinner was in charge of George Heintz and N. C. Hansen. Red candles, labra and roses comprised the dining room and table decorations.

The toastmaster of the evening was Merrill A. Ford, the advertising manager of the Hub. Speeches were made by Messrs. Jonas, Heintz, Raboli, Hansen, Smith, Woolf, and Disenberg.

Mr. A. Jonas, the president of the firm, was unavoidably detained, and was represented by J. B. Raboli, who made some interesting remarks concerning the rapid growth of the Hub—he having been with the firm for twenty years.

PLAN NEW WHARF FOR SAN LEANDRO

SAN LEANDRO, Aug. 11.—Plans and surveys are being considered for building a wharf at Huff's oyster beds, on San Leandro bay. It is thought that the San Francisco Construction Company is furthering the project. The wharf, if constructed, will be large enough to receive the scows and steamers that ply the Sacramento and San Joaquin rivers, as well as the bay craft. It will undoubtedly give a great stimulus to the market for hay, fruit and vegetables.

ARE VERY CAREFUL

Russians Take Precautions to Protect Officers From Murder.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 12.—The attempt to kill Grand Duke Nicholas Nicholasovich, president of the National Council of Defense, by the First Battalion of the Sharp Shooters of the Guard, at the review in the camp at Kresnoye Saturday, is likely to have a widespread result on the internal matters in Russia. Although the newspapers have been forbidden to print any intimation of the occurrence, the news is spreading rapidly throughout the empire and the consensus of opinion is that the attempt would have been successful were it not for the fact that certain of those entrusted with the deed were too impatient and fired before it was possible to secure the exact range of the grand duke and the hated members of the general staff who were acting as an escort.

TAKE PRECAUTIONS.
It is reported that the czar has directed that the most extraordinary precautions be taken from now on to prevent even an attempt or the life of any member of the royal family or of the high official class. Members of the secret police have been instructed that from now on it is their duty to kill all persons who are believed to be plotting assassination and these orders are very likely to be literally obeyed. The result will be outrages that are likely to inflame all Russia.

FINLAND IS AGITATED.
Conditions in Finland continue critical. By order of the governor-general, Captain Koch, leader of the Red Guard, has again been arrested, it being alleged that he was responsible for the recent mutiny at Helsinki.

All of the prisons in Finland are filling with patriots whose only crime is that they have declined to cheer for the czar and the Russian government. There are ugly mutterings among the people and it is freely reported that the Finnish revolutionary organization is planning a general attack upon all Russian officials soon who will be made to release all political offenders. At St. Petersburg the situation is quiet and the sailors in the garrison are simply held in check by the vigilance of their officers.

In the Caucasus, fighting continued, but it is not of the intensity of the past few days and the officials there state that the troops are gradually regaining control.

Three officers who are declared to have been ringleaders in the Sveaborg mutiny have been found guilty of mutiny and sentenced to be shot.

UNEARTH BIG PLOT

Further Details Show That the Panama Conspiracy Was Widespread.

PANAMA, Aug. 11.—An alleged plot on the part of prominent Colombian leaders to overthrow President Amador's government and proclaim Colombia's sovereignty over Panama again has been frustrated through the activity of the police and government authorities. Compromising documents said to give indubitable evidence of the plot are reported to have been seized on two of the Colombian conspirators.

Two Colombian generals said to be implicated in the conspiracy were seized by the police. President Amador has decided that all the obnoxious Colombians said to be implicated in the plot shall be expelled from Panama.

REPORTED LEADERS.
Generals Ruiz Sandoval and Castillo and Colonels Diaz, Galindo and Mosquera and nine other Colombian officials are reported to be the ringleaders of the alleged plot. They had numerous confederates. Their plan was to accomplish a coup d'etat by which President Amador would be overthrown and then proclaim Colombia's sovereignty over the country that was once a part of that nation.

AROUSED SUSPICION.
An interview that the two generals sought at President Amador's palace aroused the suspicion of the police. Both generals were seized, and compromising documents are said to have been found in their possession. It was reported that one of the generals was killed in resisting arrest, but this is denied.

President Amador took the discovery of the plot calmly. After the arrest of the generals he attended a musical entertainment given in celebration of the national holiday of Ecuador.

BOY IS HURT BY AUTOMOBILE

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 11.—Charles Tolm, a boy nine years of age, was struck and seriously injured this evening by an automobile driven by L. L. Lane. The injured lad was taken to the Central Emergency hospital and afterwards conveyed to his home, 2112 Market street.

REALTY VALUES THEN AND NOW

In an interview George W. Austin, the real estate man, said:

"Few people realize the present status of real estate in this city, particularly with reference to the increased values over those of a year or so ago. I will quote a few instances that are interesting at this time and none of them run back over a year."

"On the southeast corner of Ninth and Webster streets, a lot 50x75 feet in size was sold for $3000. It would bring close to $20,000 today. I sold a lot 75x75 on the opposite corner about a year ago for $6500. The present owner has just refused $12,500 for it."

"About two years ago, I sold 75x75 feet on the corner of Fourth and Washington streets for $5500. It changed hands a few days ago for close to $25,000, and is considered one of the best buys on the market at this figure."

"Twenty-five feet on Franklin near Tenth street sold for $3500 four years ago. It will take $12,500 to buy it now."

"Fifty feet front on Eleventh street, near Broadway could have been bought six months ago with $1000. The present owner, for $20,000. It takes $60,000 to buy it now, and it is good value at that figure."

"Land at San Pablo avenue and Twenty-second street has tripled in value in three years. The best lot on San Pablo avenue could have been bought three or four years ago for $850 per foot, and $2500 a foot would probably not touch it now."

"Just a few years ago property on Eighth and Alice streets sold for $4000 that is worth $12,500 now."

"Values on Twelfth street, Telegraph avenue and Clay streets have advanced in the same remarkable proportion, demonstrating the fact that the development is not on one street nor in one locality, but extends all over the city."

"Land owned on Telegraph avenue for years ago and sold at $50 a front foot, would bring $150 readily now."

"Within the past two weeks, I sold and resold a corner on Telegraph avenue and the first buyer netted about $2000 on the transaction in that short period."

"This city is like a big plant, growing, expanding in its narrow confines and forcing everything in its way. Something has to give way."

VALUES DOUBLE.
"Out on New Broadway, values have doubled in a year. Small fortunes have been made by operators in all these localities. One noticeable feature is that property is selling better today, at present prices than when it was cheaper, and the best authorities agree that more money is to be made at today's prices than ever before. It is quite noticeable that the activity has not been confined to any one locality, but has been distributed all over the city. The pending sales and new buildings that are already arranged for or contemplated, will, in my opinion, when nearer completion, give a new and startling impetus to real estate operations. Every dealer and broker in this city is, however, unanimous in the opinion that this is a model market and sufficiently active to suit everybody, even if there were no increase in volume of business whatever."

"Outside enterprises and new capital are surprising the people of Oakland, and it hasn't well begun. One hundred new buildings down town would not accommodate the present demand by tenants."

IS KILLED IN AUTO WRECK

Machine Hits Steel Bridge While Running at High Rate of Speed.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Aug. 11.—Joseph Locke, a Philadelphia chauffeur, was killed tonight, and Allan Wilson, who is well known about town in club circles, is unconscious in the city hospital, and is in a critical condition, while Miss Margaret Sutton of Philadelphia was bruised in a painful manner through an automobile smashing into a steel bridge on the Meadow Boulevard tonight not far from Pleasantville.

Captain Higgins, a Philadelphia lawyer, saw the wreck and immediately picked up the dead man and the injured and brought them to the hospital. Wilson was still unconscious at midnight. Locke was dead when picked up. The car was running at a high rate of speed and had struck the iron work with terrific force.

Shoots Himself As Result of Worry Over Earthquake.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 11.—Excessive nervousness, caused by the earthquake and fire, is thought to have induced Louis Ninkesch, a prosperous candy merchant at 2708 Twenty-fourth street, to blow the top of his head off this evening with a pistol. Miss Jennie Pederson and George Grassman, employees of the candy store, heard the shot at 8 o'clock this evening, but did not pay any attention to it until 9 o'clock, when they closed up the establishment.

Ever since the earthquake the proprietor has been in a nervous condition, and it is thought that he went temporarily insane. He was twenty-six years of age, and was unmarried.

MISSIONARY MEETING.
There will be a meeting of unusual interest held in the parlors of the Union street church next Tuesday, August 14th, at 7:30 o'clock. Miss Edna McGraw will speak of her work in Utah. Everyone welcome.

The New Model Sack Suit $25.00

If we could only show these suits instead of trying to describe them in print!

The values, based on what we find in other stores, run as high as $30.00.

But that does not convey the idea you want. What you want is to know how they look, what choice of patterns there is, whether there are plenty of the light grays and fashionable checks, plaids and overplaids; whether they are made as fashionable suits ought to be made.

Come in and look. Note the masterful tailoring, the clever lines, examine the seams, the interlining, the fabric, and if you don't declare them the equal of most $30.00 suits you are no judge of clothing. We dare you to criticize them! Now, come on.

Boys' Norfolk Double Breasted and 3 Piece Suits Special $4.45

We have taken all of our broken lots of Norfolk, double breasted, and three-piece suits, that originally sold for $5, $6 and $7 and marked them $4.45 to close out.

Every suit is just as good as it was when first unpacked, only that fact that lines are broken (which makes them hard to sell), induced the price reduction.

The materials are of serge, tweeds, worsteds and cheviots; the colors are blue, various shades of brown, grays and mixtures.

One double breasted line, that is especially charming, is a soft gray over plaid, that is admirably adapted to school wear.

The sizes are for chaps from 8 to 16 years of age.

REARREST CASHIER

Official of Looted Bank
of $68,000.

CHICAGO, Aug. 11.—Henry W. Hering, cashier of the wrecked Milwaukee Avenue State Bank, was arrested again this afternoon on eight bench warrants as he left Assistant Chief Schuetzler's office in the city hall and taken in a carriage to the criminal court building. Falling to furnish bonds of $68,000, Hering was taken to the county jail. In a dramatic scene in Judge Carsten's court, he declared himself innocent, while his wife and eldest daughter sat weeping on a bench.

The warrants had been issued at the instance of State's Attorney Healy and embrace charges of forgery, conspiracy, larceny, perjury and embezzlement.

READY TO GO.

Hering had been in the office of Assistant Superintendent of Police for some time, undergoing examination. As he stepped out of the door after the ordeal he was met by the representative of the sheriff's office, who placed him under arrest.

Hering was not visibly disturbed by the new turn of affairs. He smiled and remarked: "All right, I'll go with you."

After he arrived at the criminal court building he was taken before Judge Kersten and the warrants were formally read to the prisoner.

AFTER STENSLAND.

Bench warrants were also issued for Paul O. Stensland, the fugitive bank president, his son Theodore and others who are supposed to be implicated in the forgeries, conspiracy, larceny etc., but these latter names are withheld from the public for the present.

It was intimated that every official and many employees of the bank would be drawn into the net now being constructed by the state's attorney to aid in the investigation.

In the meantime conference with the federal authorities was sought by the state's attorney and it was admitted that arrangements for extradition of Stensland was the object. This gave rise to the rumor that the state's attorney had been informed of the whereabouts of Stensland.

WOULD NOT TELL.

Assistant State's Attorney Olsen declined to say whether or not his office had learned where Stensland is hiding, but declared that he would be captured.

More than 500 Polish residents of the north side, all of whom are depositors in the looted bank, met at 3 p. m. today to organize the Polish Depositors Protective Association of Chicago. More than half of those present were women and many of them were weeping. The meeting was called by the Rev. Francis Gordon, pastor of St. Stanislaw's church. The Polish National Alliance was represented by its president, Marlon Stenszinski. Leo Szelinski of the Roman Catholic Union, which has a membership of 50,000, represented that order.

HOOT AT DEAD MAN.

Crowds of hooting, yelling men, women and children today surrounded the house at 320 North Carpenter street, wherein lay the body of Frank K. Kowalski, teller of the defunct bank, who shot himself last evening as a result of the taunts of neighbors, involving his name in the network of fraud and crime in which the bank is wrapped. Maledictions in several languages were uttered against the dead man.

Women stormed the door and children tore away the modest wreath of flowers and the black crape, trampling these sacred signs of death under foot. Men gained admittance to the house under the guise of friendship, and then, in the face of weeping women, sisters and cousins, wrecked the casket, hurled monstrous accusations at the pale dead body, shaking their fists and storming like bedlamites. The police were finally summoned to keep sanctuary for the body.

COUNTY WILL HAVE EXHIBIT

Alameda's Display at State Fair at Sacramento Finest Ever Attempted.

The forthcoming exhibit of the products of Alameda county at the state fair the last week in this month will be the finest ever attempted by the county. Chairman W. H. Welby of the exhibit committee of the Chamber of Commerce under whose supervision the exhibit is being collected, reports that never before was so much enthusiasm shown by both agriculturists and manufacturers as at the present time. More than seventy-five manufacturers have up to date signified to Mr. Welby their intention to make a display of their manufactures. The number is being added to daily and the solicitors employed by Mr. Welby report that there is not the slightest doubt about the exhibit being by far the finest ever shown by this county. The agriculturists throughout the county are as enthusiastic as the manufacturers and from all sections of Alameda county are coming reports of the co-operation of the growers, packers and canners. Chairman Welby is certain that the exhibit will be far in excess both in variety and excellence of displays of anything ever before even attempted by Alameda county. He is personally supervising the collection and will also attend to the installation of the exhibit. The state fair commission has already been asked for considerable space in addition to what was at first thought to be sufficient.

GOSSIP FROM THE SAN FRANCISCO WEEKLIES

ODD MRS. OWANG.

The reporters by whom was narrated the story of the Chinese Vice-Consul's attempt to have his wife committed to an asylum had not the faintest inkling to the romantic interest attached to the personality and career of that little mongolian woman. Mrs. King Owang is no commonplace Chinese. On the contrary, she is the oddest slant-eyed beauty that ever graced a diplomatic function at the home of the representative of her Imperial Highness in the old Chinese quarter. Lily King, as she is known to her white friends, is Chinese in everything but temperament and taste and in those she is irrevocably European. She acquired both at an American seminary and they were indelibly impressed upon her nature. She was not born in China, as the dailies have asserted, but in Grass Valley, where her father, Lin Loy, was a merchant, one of the pioneers of the county, who accumulated a large fortune. In childhood she associated with the white children in the neighborhood of her home, and attended a public school and when she grew up she induced her father to send her to a ladies' seminary where she acquired all the accomplishments that distinguish graduates of finishing schools. In her teens it was her ambition to marry a white man, but as she afterwards said, "I came to San Francisco and carried off the catch of the Chinese colony." King Owang was then a young man who had shortly before graduated from an American university, and he was very proud of his talent and pretty wife, but it was not long before difference arose. Mrs. Owang had a penchant for French bonnets and the daintiest of American bonnets and never eluded herself in Oriental garb except on state occasions when she played hostess at the consulate. And to those functions she always invited her old school chums and devoted most of her attention to them. As a consequence she was not popular in Chinatown. The Chinese resented her fondness for American fashions and the customs of the white devils. She was seldom seen on the street with her husband, the reason being that she disliked being seen with a man who wore the Chinese costume. But her escort on many occasions was a young Chinese college chum of her husband, who donned a frock coat. He frequently accompanied her to the American theaters, but she preferred to attend the matinees with her girl friends and she became quite an ardent worshipper of handsome actors, whose praises she loved to sing.—Town Talk.

SHE WAS ONCE A FAD.

The Owangs lived in the old Pioche residence on Stockton street which was the Chinese consulate, but Mrs. Owang spent a deal of time visiting in the Western Addition. She was an enthusiastic amateur photographer and went about very often with her camera. At one time it was quite a fad among Americans to meet Mrs. Owang, or Mrs. King, as she preferred to be called, because she had such a pleasing manner and entertained so sumptuously. At the time of the World's Fair she was one of a select party of Americans that made the trip via Banff. It was thought advisable to obtain a passport for her, for though she was native born, the party wished to avoid complications crossing the border. In this connection an amusing incident occurred. When the party was re-entering this country the inspector, in quest of the lady of Mongolian descent, passed by Mrs. Owang and picked out a little lady of French ancestry as the "Chinawoman," which contretemps occasioned much embarrassment. Some time ago the little woman took up the study of medicine, her purpose being to benefit the women of her race. Always an enthusiast, she pursued her self-appointed task with such zeal and energy that her health broke down under the strain. Never very strong, she began to exhibit symptoms of tuberculosis and suffered several hemorrhages. It was then that she began to have recourse to stimulants, and the result was most unfortunate. Today she is a pathetic wreck. Her many friends of former days will no doubt grieve to learn of the sad ending of what once promised to be a brilliant career.—Town Talk.

THE SPRECKELS HOME TO GO.

A great deal has been said about the courage and stoicism of San Franciscans in the face of overwhelming disaster, but there is another remarkable phenomenon which has provoked no comment. I refer to the successful suppression of sentimental emotion among our plutocrats as evidenced by their alacrity in surrendering their homes to business firms in the interest of trade. Some of our rich citizens have given fine examples in civic patriotism by sacrificing their palaces on the altar of commerce. To be sure, they are getting high rents, but it was no mercenary motive that prompted them to transform their homes into stores. One of the last of the Van Ness avenue palaces to be put on the market is the Spreckels' brown stone, the palace that was built for Emma Spreckels before she thought of marrying Tom Watson. It was offered to John Tait of Tait's Cafe, for two thousand dollars a month, and he accepted the offer, intending to fit the mansion up as one of the most sumptuous restaurants in the country. As soon as it was learned that he was to become Spreckels' tenant, there was a great demand for ground space along the Van Ness avenue frontage, and in a short time he had agreed to sub-let sufficient space to produce an income of $2200 a month. Meanwhile he was having an estimate made of the cost of repairing the building and his architect found that it could not be put in proper condition for less than thirty thousand dollars. Tait called the deal off, but as his present quarters are not sufficiently commodious, he is having a roof-garden built alongside the old Wallace home on the avenue. It will extend over the roofs of the buildings on the south side and will have a seating capacity of two hundred; and it will be connected with the main restaurant. Judging from the architects' plans, this roof-garden will surpass in magnificence anything in the cafe line that the city has ever seen.—Town Talk.

MAY NOT RETURN.

Peter Robertson, the Chronicle's dramatic critic, is also on a vacation and is passing the summer in Sonoma county. I hear that it is quite within the realm of probability that he will never return to the Chronicle and may leave the city altogether.—Wasp.

AT THE GROVE.

Professor Henry Morse Stephens is one of those who go every year to the Bohemian Grove and camp there the entire two weeks. It is the only recreation he gives himself. Col. Hawes went up early. Judge Lawlor, Ned Greenway, J. J. Crooks, Jack Spreckels, and many others went up Saturday. Many motored up. Joe Redding managed to time things so beautifully on his trip West from New York that he got Mrs. Corey her divorce at Reno, and came down in the nick of time to go with the Bohemians to their druidical rites.

One of the earliest arrivals at Bohemian Grove was Willis Polk, who had put in a strenuous day. One of the incidents thereof was the calling of City Engineer Woodward "a pinhead." Oh, heavens, what sacrilege! The special pet of the administration who was taken from the printer's case and raised to the dignity of head surveyor of the municipality to be called a "pinhead" in open meeting of some of the most noted and notorious citizens of San Francisco. It was all over the Burnham plans for the beautification of San Francisco, as the world knows. Mr. Woodward found them as full of errors as the first proof of a bad job of printing. He moreover foolishly intimated as much, though not in so many words. To slur in the presence of Willis Polk anything evolved by the able hand and knowledgeable brain of Dan Burnham is to invite trouble. That the talented, but peppery architect merely called the critic "a pinhead" is little short of miraculous. There are a baker's dozen of uglier names that he could just as easily have used, and in Tennessee they don't lose any sleep over such matters. The first name that comes to the tongue suits as well as any other. Seriously speaking, though, I think Architect Polk somewhat overshot the mark in calling the City Engineer "a pinhead." There are several specimens of his handiwork in existence that belie the appellation. On Dolores street, near Sixteenth, the City Engineer has planned two grass plots that seem not more than a hundred yards or so out of whack. A slight error of a hundred yards in a block is so near perfection for a disciple of Caxton who has taken to the surveyor's trade, that it is really a certificate of ability. It completely disproves the correctness of Architect Polk's epithet of "pinhead." "Figurehead" would have been better.—Wasp.

ASHTON STEVENS' CONDITION.

The latest news from the summer resort where Ashton Stevens has been taking the rest cure for two months is not at all comforting to his friends. Though the brilliant and popular critic is said to be convalescing, his vitality is far from restored, and his recuperative powers have proved far from adequate to the ordeal. When Stevens went away his nervous system was severely shattered, and for a time his condition seemed hopeless, but he rallied and slowly improved. A long time, however, must yet elapse before he will be able to get back to work.—Town Talk.

KEEPING BERKELEY AWAKE.

The even tenor of life in staid, somnolent, conventional Berkeley has been somewhat disturbed of late, I am told, by the colony of pleasure-lovers from this side of the bay. In the past, the curfew was usually sounded in the university town about 9 P. M. The stillness of the tomb reigned an hour or two later. It is not so now. The honors due "the shank of the evening" are fully accorded by the immigrants from across the bay, and the Berkeleyites have not yet fully made up their minds whether they like it or not. Some do. Some do not. That popular pastime, the Welsh rarebit party, which never convenes before 11 P. M., retains its popularity with the joyful San Franciscans, and that stage of the post-rarebitian period commonly reached about 1 A. M. has not served to promote the erstwhile stillness of the sleepy town. Recently there was a jolly party in the studio of a well-known artist who has established himself in Berkeley. It did not gather, of course, until about 11 P. M. At 1 A. M. it was just where it should be. Then the landlord butted in. That was some days ago. That the spirit of nocturnal enjoyment is growing in Berkeley may be inferred from the fact that the same landlord is now reconciled to 3 A. M. as a good-night hour, and there are others. Indeed, some of the aborigines of Berkeley—at least the younger contingent—are even so daring as to accept with glee the invitations to the owl parties, which promise to be increasingly popular. As a seat of learning Berkeley holds well up to standards. Her inhabitants are apt scholars. They have good teachers.—Town Talk.

W. J. Dingee Will Soon Go to City

THE KNAVE

The Mayor Turns Down Prominent

SAN FRANCISCO, August 11th.

I regret to note that William J. Dingee is about to transfer his business headquarters from this city to New York. Of course, he will not entirely abandon us, for I am told he will maintain his palatial home at Redwood City. In fact, I am not sure that he will give up California, which has been so kind to him, as his legal residence. But the bulk of his financial operations will henceforth be conducted in the metropolis.

Of late Mr. Dingee has branched out as a financier on a scale broader than any other Californian since the golden days of Ralston and the remarkable corps of men that surrounded him. He has handled more big deals than any one else I know out here, and has succeeded in keeping them quiet. Unlike many of our multi-millionaires, Mr. Dingee has resented newspaper notoriety rather than courted it. He has always sought privacy on the ground that so long as he put through his deals legitimately it was no one's business save those vitally concerned.

Mr. Dingee has been largely interested in a number of eastern ventures during the past few years, and it was this fact more than anything else that compelled him to sell his vast interests in the Contra Costa Water Company. He now feels that to carry on these investments successfully it will be necessary for him to be in New York for at least six months each year and to so locate his business headquarters that he will be constantly in immediate touch with the nation's great financial centers.

William J. Dingee is a distinct type of the successful American. He has gathered his great fortune through hard work, skillful planning, thrift and a faculty for seizing and making the most of an opportunity. This latter trait is perhaps one of the rarest that God has given man. It is the cornerstone of the greatness of the world's leaders from Alexander to Lincoln. Without it the other elements that go to make up a successful career become spineless.

In his fight for millions Dingee has made many enemies and many friends. His enemies are extremely bitter and his friends are equally loyal. There are men who manage to go through life without making an enemy. I would not like to be listed as a specimen of this type. A man without an enemy in the modern fight for fortune is an odorless flower. He is essentially without character and of necessity without opinion. Let no such men be trusted.

Because of his forthrightness and direct manner of dealing, Dingee has naturally made enemies; but he has also enlisted in his cause men who are ready to stand by him to the end. That's the sort of a man I like. That's the sort of man you want for a companion when crossing a desert.

After all it is only men with definite personalities and definite motives who achieve anything worth while. Your namby pamby fellow never does much beyond the pink ribbon game. Show me a man with nothing but friends and I will show you a man without the power to publicly express his honest opinion or take sides on a public question.

All men without character are popular. Men with definite ideas and definite plans for carrying them out scorn negative personalities. They want results not explanations. Dingee has always called for the ultimate from his assistants or associates. He has never listened to tales of failure.

Dingee's management of the Hayward estate is one of the most successful on record. He took that great property when it was encumbered with debt, and has gradually closed it out until it is now almost all in the shape of ready money or gilt-edged securities. He first sold out the real estate in San Francisco and thus escaped the misfortune of the fire and earthquake. His last deal was to sell out its enormous holdings of the Contra Costa Water Company stock for a high figure. That in brief was precisely what he did with his own real estate and stock holdings. He is now the dominant figure in the cement industry of the Pacific Coast, and will probably remain so for many years to come. He is also the head of the slate industry, which he has developed into large proportions. It is needless to say that such a man as Mr. Dingee will be greatly missed and a loss to California, for men of his ideas and alertness of conception are few and far between.

renew the license of "Pratt and Tierney" is one of the most significant acts of the new board. Some weeks ago I wrote that the mayor had determined to break away from the Maestrettis and the administration supporters of that type. First Dr. Poheim was dropped from the board of police commissioners. Then Alex. O'Grady was passed the axe. Reagan also was decapitated.

However, when O'Grady was placed among the "outs" by the mayor, I stated that in all probability he would be properly taken care of for the simple reason that he is a man of genuine ability and has a capacity for speechmaking. I also remarked that a man with the gift of gab is exceedingly dangerous in the eyes of an administration which runs close to the border line. It is better to placate a good spellbinder than to have him denounce you at the wrong time. Tammany has always found good jobs for Bourke Cochrane for the reason that he can talk a little better than any one else in the country.

The turning down of "Pratt and Tierney" is proof positive that the mayor has absolutely abandoned the tenderloin politicians who cut such a wide swath in his three campaigns. Foremost of the redlight supporters of the administration at the primaries and at the polls on election day were "Bill" Pratt and "Mat" Tierney. They worked for the "cause" day and night and spent considerable money to secure practical advancement of the "cause."

Incidentally Tierney is the brother-in-law of Detective Ed Wren, who was Chief Dinan's partner in the thief-taking business before Dinan was made chief of police. Dinan was the mayor's best man when he was married. All these things put together, could there be any reason for believing that the firm of "Pratt and Tierney" was in line for favors from the administration.

But they were turned down by Leahy, who undoubtedly acted under instructions from the mayor. Now the other gentlemen who have been boasting that Schmitz would see that they had permission to violate the liquor laws are wondering where they are going to get off. For their own information I may as well inform them that they are going to get off the wrong end of the car so far as the mayor is concerned, for Schmitz has made an entirely new deal since the earthquake, and henceforth will have nothing to do with the low-browed herd that supported him at the polls in former campaigns.

In assuming this attitude he is taking the advice of J. Downey Harvey and the other firstclass men who now participate in his councils. It is all right to use people of questionable character during times of war or when it is necessary to win a victory at any cost; but after the smoke of battle has passed away you don't want to associate with them or have them coming to your home.

The revocation of the liquor license of Dunn brothers, who conducted a combination bar, dance hall and general deadfall on Market street, opposite Seventh, is another surprise to the Eagles and the other organizations with which the Duns were connected. They were supposed to have a very strong pull with the administration, and acting upon that assumption violated the liquor ordinance since the saloons were given permission to reopen. The fact that they sold drinks in their back rooms after 8 o'clock at night has been notorious, and when it was hinted that unless they stopped they might get into trouble, their associates laughed the idea out of countenance. They explained the Duns had done too much on election day to be treated as ordinary taxpayers. But they were.

Here is a description of a Bohemian marriage that took place recently in New York in a fashionable cafe as written by a member of the sporting staff: "The bride and groom arrived pretty well teed up. The judge engaged to perform the ceremony was soused to the eyes. A unique incident of the ceremony was the dispensing of the conventional flower girls. They simply had a beautiful child that marched in front of the happy couple, scattering Martin cocktails in their path. Instead of a bridesmaid the bride was attended by a bottle of Pomeroy. The only female attendant carried a bouquet composed of picon punches, a couple of whisky highballs and a frozen absinthe. The groom leaned on a cobwebbed bottle of rare old Burgundy as he was being signed, sealed and delivered into the lobster class. Take my tip, it was a wet wedding. After the happy twain had been tied into a bowknot the bunch sat down to breakfast which began with froglegs and ended with electric pousse cafes. As the happy couple left the cafe to board their automobile which was stocked better than any saloon in San Francisco the merry guests pelted them with cherries and olives that had done service in the cafe cocktails for lo! these many moons. Then the guests played the merry game of bottle, bottle, whose got the lemon. The arrival of the police and the fire department brought the festivities to a fitting close."

Now, what d'ye think of that?

Already the Gaus-Nelson match is emitting a bad odor. Notwithstanding the notorious fact that Gaus is broke and has been broke for the last two years, press dispatches from Goldfield Wednesday night stated that the coon had deposited $20,000 in a Nevada bank, and to the people who know there can be but one interpretation of this incident if it is true.

If Gaus has $20,000 he received it for some particular part he is to play in his battle with Nelson. If he has not $20,000 and if the story of his sudden wealth is a mere hopes, then the manipulators of the big event had better get somebody to do their press work with more under his hat than hair. Nothing could more vitally discredit the proposed battle than this $20,000 story.

Everybody is wondering who is going to be the referee. There have been indications in the newspapers that Eddie Graney is to decide the winner. I think Graney would be very foolish to accept the position of referee in this particular instance, no matter how much advertising he may get out of it.

In the first place he has practically posed as Gaus' manager for several months, and only a few weeks ago it was announced in the public prints that Nolan had given him carte blanche in the making of matches for the Dane. I think it would be just as logical to have Billy Nolan for referee as Graney. I think if both managers went into the ring and tossed a coin to determine which would referee the go, the public would be more satisfied than if they settled the thing between themselves in private.

As a financial proposition the offering of a $30,000 purse for this go by the Nevada sports, borders on joke-land. In the first place Goldfields is a hard place to get to. It is on a jerk-water line and the traveling accommodations are exceedingly primitive. So far as hotels and eating places are concerned, it is practically barren. Incidentally the telegraph facilities are very meager. In consequence the newspapers do not relish the outlook.

Of course, the fight may be on the square, and it may go down in history as one of the world's great pugilistic battles, and I hope it will. But the managers ought to get together as quickly as possible and do everything in their power to prevent the recurring of the incidents of the past week that tend to give the affair the aspect of a hippodrome.

It is now certain that Mayor Schmitz is going to have the head of Maestretti, chairman of the Public Works Commission. There is already enough evidence in hand against Maestretti to justify his removal without further investigation, but the mayor feels that Maestretti is entitled to more than usual consideration from the fact that he was so outrageously persecuted by Judge Lawlor and the Andrews grand jury in their effort to send him to state's prison, because of his alleged connection with ballot-box stuffing.

It doesn't matter whether Maestretti was guilty as charged or not. The fact remains that a determined and concerted effort was made to deprive him of his liberty through perjured testimony. So instead of clothing him in stripes his persecutors unintentionally garbed him as a martyr.

However, Mayor Schmitz will not oust Maestretti from office while the newspapers are attacking him. Nor will he remove him from his job because of any specific dereliction of duty discovered by a newspaper. He is quietly making an investigation on his own hook and when he finds a good enough excuse to get rid of the marble cutter, he will drop him just as he dropped Police Commissioners Poheim and Reagan. The mayor has been so bitterly and so unreasonably assailed in the public prints that he is loth to satisfy the editors by taking action on their complaints. In his official eyes a printed knock is the best sort of a boost.

By ADELAIDE SELL BAKER.

"In Cure of Her Soul," by E. J. Stimson (D. Appleton & Co.), which became familiar to many readers through the serial publication, is one of the few really serious books of the year. It might appropriately be ranked among the problem stories. In fact, many critics agree that to a certain extent it resembles Eliza Wharton's "The House of Mirth." Just where the likeness lies might be hard to define. The similarity lies however, not in the plot, but in the stories, just the same, the author's command of the English language is so good, and the story is so well told, that it is not surprising that it has become so popular.

Mr. Stimson's story is a novel in the truest sense of the word. The race discrimination in choice of words and in the construction of sentences which one would expect from an author of so high standing, yet with it all, the "In Cure of Her Soul" is an intensely interesting book, the more so that its people are of the real flesh and blood sort. They seem like men and women, with human passions, human hopes, aspirations and failures.

While the story deals with Americans who move in the higher social circles, the principles are not applied solely to the pursuit of pleasure. It is a story of a literary gem.

Mr. Stimson's plot is a masterpiece of the kind.

Following the plot of the story, Austin Pinckney, twenty-two, a clean, wholesome, well-to-do young man of lofty ideals but no affect of the heart—or, at least, only a dormant fancy—is told of the engagement of a cousin, Dorothy Somers, to one Peter Gansvoort, a rich, stupid and commonplace member of an assured social standing and large family tree. Pinckney had met Miss Somers abroad, and she had taken his fancy, that was all. But the news of her engagement to another man came in the form of a shock. Nothing, however, much more than it had been for the kind, unpretentious, and of the major, who, though the first time it appears to have had a decided predilection for matchmaking, Dorothy had in her heart a secret admiration for Pinckney, who was a handsome, attractive young man, but she had no love at all, not even respect for Gansvoort. The engagement had been solely of her mother's making. Mrs. Somers belonged to the type of women so often met with in fashionable society. To have her daughter self-married to a man of wealth and position was to see ambitions realized. The two typified all that was necessary to a girl's happiness. Of anything other than this she took no thought.

Major Brandon, furthered Austin Pinckney's indignation against Dorothy's marriage to Gansvoort. In a remarkably short space of time there was a wedding, unknown to Mrs. Somers. Dorothy, of course, was the bride, and Arthur Pinckney the happy man. It was, all things considered, a remarkably "lucky" affair, even from the novelist's point of view, and seems to have been really unpremeditated by both of the principals. Indeed, had it not been for the major, it is doubtful that Dorothy would have married Peter, and have been in all probability, happier than she was with Pinckney. But it all happened differently, or "In Cure of Her Soul" would never have been written.

As it was, Austin Pinckney was a man of unbounded aspirations. In the beginning it had been his intention to enter public life. He was not consciously rich, as was Gansvoort, but he was in comparatively good circumstances, and he clung to his decision, despite the fact that he had a bride to consider.

Mrs. Somers forgave the runaway, as all well-regulated mothers have a habit of doing, and soon dropped out of sight. She is possibly, the smallest factor in the story—a mere figurehead, who appears once in a while to give the others an opportunity of doing something.

Dorothy was a pretty woman, and at the beginning of a very short life. The first year of the married life was perfect, from every standpoint, and I am not sure that Pinckney himself was the one most to blame for the future misfortune, and that Dorothy would have kept strictly by his side had he not become immersed practically day and night, in affairs of business. As it was, the couple drifted apart, the husband absenting himself more and more from home, and Dorothy entering deeper and deeper into social life. There were no children to tighten the bond between the two, and, naturally, the affections did not deepen under such conditions.

Austin Pinckney was an unusual sort of man, even he, however, was occasionally led into an indiscretion. For instance, on one occasion he kissed a remarkably fascinating woman, and was led to suffer innumerable conspicuous thrills thereby. Dorothy, as was to have been expected of so youthful and beautiful a woman, loved desperately with all who came her way. She did innumerable compromising things, but never anything which departed her from the circle in which she moved. In fact, heartlessness appears to have characterized her every movement. Pinckney was of the mold. In his loneliness he thought seriously of entering into settlement work. In which some of his friends were engaged. He did so, and in this connection met a young woman—Mary Ravenel. She is a southerner, with a rascally old father who never hesitates to impose upon her whenever the occasion offers. Mary Ravenel is an unusual kind of young woman. She is beautiful in mind as well as body. Her home is on a plantation in the South. Here she lived with her maternal grandmother. At certain seasons of the year she came on to New York, where she occupied herself in works of philanthropy. From the first, the two are interested in each other; this interest soon deepens into love. In the course of time he tells her of his adoration, and learns what he already knew—that she reciprocated. But the love is on a higher plane. There is no talk of divorce or marriage. Each recognizes the hopelessness of it all, together with a sort of boisterous feeling hard for worldly minds to comprehend.

Meanwhile, a son is born to Pinckney, but the bond does not strengthen between husband and wife. Mrs. Pinckney has gone to Europe with her sister, and in the old world she still pursues the phantom of pleasure. During this interval Mary Ravenel has become an invalid, and finally dies, leaving Austin Pinckney the victim of deception.

Finally, with the passing of time, Dorothy awakens to a realization of the life she has been leading, and she begins to long for love; to quote from the book, "she had found her soul."

Her husband crossed the ocean to her, and finally an understanding is arrived at, and together the two return to America, to begin life anew.

Many other figures in the story, and stocks, bonds and affairs of business are mentioned, and indeed, bear prominently upon the final outcome. After all, however, the real interest centers about Dorothy Pinckney, Austin and Mary Ravenel. The others serve to color the story with reality. There is some good analytical work, and the different types are clearly drawn. Altogether, the story is not without a moral. The old lesson of "live and let live" is thoroughly exemplified, and summed up in the concluding pages of Dorothy the author says:

"And then the agony of self-communing would recur. At least, though, with her, there had been honest love—honest love—not indeed such as a man. She had for love, that old day thrown Gansvoort over for Austin. Many tears had learned the truth to Dorothy's eyes, those days. That love was not enough. But now—If Austin could know! If Austin could but know! She was starving—she was starving—for a word of love. And now she had forfeited the right to tell him."

"She knew that she had changed, but it sometimes seemed to her that he had not tried to see. Ever the major saw. The major had been very friendly with her that summer, and he had not been friendly for many years. Little Austin would sometimes say 'Why, Mamma, you are crying,' and she would clasp him passionately in her arms. But so, the chrysalis was broken. She had found her soul."

"To Austin, who had once been so rich to losing his, God's messenger had laid aside the mask."

And last of all his heart now yearned to her that was his wife, the wife of his youth—his hand had never strengthened her, his heart had not been there to comfort her. First, now, he saw the strength of his own creed. Their bond had been at first of passion; there it had failed. Yet might it grow to be a sacrament? One moment she looked up in his eyes, and knew, for the last time, tears. For through them she saw that he, too, knew."

LITERARY NOTES FROM HERE AND THERE.

G. P. Putnam's Sons announce that in October they will begin the publication of Putnam's Monthly, resuming the magazine first published by the late George P. Putnam in 1853. With the new Putnam's will be incorporated the Critic, which has been issued by Putnam's since 1858. When Putnam's was first established, half a century ago, the greater number of the magazines printed at that time in the United States were made up of clippings from English magazines, but Putnam's contained no material that was not prepared expressly for its pages. "The Potpourri Papers" and "True and False" of George William Curtis, "Fireside travels" and "The Moosehead Journal" of James Russell Lowell, the "Cape Cod" of Thoreau, and the spirited political articles in which Parker Goodwin outlined the principles and formulated the platform of the coming Republican party—these and many similar noteworthy contributions were hailed as establishing a new standard for American magazine literature. Like the Forerunner (the suspension of which was an incident of the commercial panic of 1857) the new Putnam's will be a magazine of general interest, but of a decided literary character. Precedence will, as before, be given to American themes and writers, but contributions from over the sea will be welcomed whenever they seem likely to meet the special interests of American readers. Social topics and questions of the day will be considered, with due philosophical detachment, by writers who have given special attention to the essay form of literature. Politics will lie outside of the general purpose or range of the magazine, but space will from time to time be made for studies of national and of international policies, and for analyses of political tendencies. While fiction is not to be the special characteristic of the new Putnam's, pure will be reserved for stories of a distinctive character. New books which appear to possess more than ephemeral importance will be reviewed at length; others will be recommended, classified, and so far as space permits, criticized. The regular contributors to the Critic, whose papers have won an increasing circle of appreciative readers, will be retained for the new magazine. It is proposed to include illustrations for all articles the subjects of which can thereby be more effectively presented.

"I was complaining once to Mr. Dandridge," she said a friend recently, "that I could not write a novel, because I had no plot. 'No plot?' he said; 'why, I could give you twenty plots in half an hour.' At which I laughed, but he insisted dogmatically, 'I will.' The story came that once, when I was away from home, he amused himself by writing out a plot—in twenty-four chapters! Or, of that plot I afterwards constructed a story. That story became

HILDEBRAND AIDS SEALS TO LOSE

"Oh, George, that you should treat us like this," remarked Parke Wilson after the game at Idora park yesterday, and his remark was addressed to George Hildebrand, left fielder of the Seals.

"Verily," quoth George, "it is the fortunes of war," and accepting this as the only logical excuse, Parke relapsed into silence.

Hildebrand's awful relapse from the path of the virtuous and good ball player happened along in the eighth inning of the game yesterday, and the result of his mistakes was an addition of four tallies to the Angels' side of the credit account. Had it been a single error Parke might have said that it was most unwise of George, but when the stocky little left fielder accumulated as many as a brace of errors on the one play it was no wonder that Wilson waxed wroth.

BASES FULL

At the time of the awful catastrophe the bases were full, and one McClellan seized a big stick and maneuvered up to the plate with the intention of doing everything. He could think of no Williams, but while first baseman of the Seals, who for the occasion was doing star duty.

Mac's contribution should have ended in a fly out to Hildebrand, but Hildebrand's thoughts were elsewhere, and after having the sphere once safely in his mitt he dropped it and then developments ensued. Dillon naturally made a dash for the plate, and Hildebrand determined that he should retrieve himself by throwing the Cherub leader out, but he didn't.

PAINFUL THROW

His throw was awful—and then some—and not only Dillon, but three others, except Toman, Ellis and McClellan, came scampering home and a score that ought to have been tied was in favor of the Seraphs by a trifle of four runs.

Further effort was useless and it was Angel pie for the rest of the time. Before the agony was over the chimes rolled out once more and Dillon and his bunch had taken the second game of the series.

MANNER OF ACQUIRING

After the Angels had acquired a lone tally in the first the Seals came through with a couple of the things they are paid for getting and the manner in which they secured them was like this:

Wheeler was allowed to trot to first by virtue of having carved four balls, and on Mohler's infield hit he maneuvered to the third stopping place. He got there some three seconds after the ball, but the umpire gave him safe and this was all that was required. A double steal in which he took part brought him home, and Kid Mohler bled to second. George Hildebrand came along then with a three-bagger wrapped up in his bat, and the Kid reached the plate. It was a pleasing prospect from a San Francisco point of view when Irwin got to third on a fielder's choice, Hildebrand's antics between third and home bringing Charlie around, but another out stopped the happenings right there.

AIDED BY NICK

Toman scored one more for the Cherubs in the next inning, being materially assisted on his way by a wild pitch by Nicholas Longworth Williams.

The Dillon people came back strong in the seventh, and their work earned for them a couple of tallies.

Ellis had singled and stole second when McClellan lined out a double which brought him home. Bergeman foolishly flew out, but the out was useful, nevertheless, as McClellan had lots of time to beat the throw home. The game ended in a spectacular manner and Mr. Hodson, who had kindly consented to arbitrate all disputes, was escorted off the field by Parke Wilson, who was under the erroneous impression that he had a grievance.

SPENCER TOO SLOW

Spencer was at the bat after two men had gone under in the last spasm and he tipped one up in the air where it was easy for Mangerina to grab it. This the catcher failed to do, and while Spencer was acquiring some knowledge of the game from Hodson the catcher threw the ball to Dillon and Spencer was out for sure. Had he kept on running without stopping to ask whether or not it was a foul ball

AUTOIST MAY MAKE NEW RECORD

CHICAGO, Aug. 11.—T. T. Whitman, who is on his way from San Francisco to New York, in an effort to break his former record time of thirty-three days and who left San Francisco on August 2d, is expected to pass through Chicago tomorrow afternoon or evening. Many local autoists are preparing to meet the cross-country motorist at Naperville, Illinois, and escort him through the city.

Whitman carries a message from Mayor Schmitz of San Francisco to Mayor McClellan of New York, which he hopes to deliver to the latter inside of thirty days from the time of his departure from the former city.

OARSMEN HAVE EXCITING RACES

WORCESTER, MASS., Aug. 11.—The final events in the thirty-fourth annual regatta of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen were run off on Lake Quinsigamond this afternoon. On the whole all the racing was exciting and an excellent afternoon's sport was furnished for upward of 25,000 spectators. There were no mishaps in the association's senior singles, final heat, Harry S. Bennett, of Springfield, was returned a winner after a grueling finish with John O'Neill, the Halifax sculler, a close second. Although he was entitled by his victory to compete, Bennett did not enter the championship slugs event to compete with Titus and Shepard. In this event there was never any doubt as to who the new champion would be. It was Titus' race from the pistol shot. In ten minutes, five seconds he finished lengths ahead of Shepard, who did not trouble him sufficient to row to the finish line.

SALVADORE IS WINNER IN RACE

SARATOGA RACE TRACK, N. Y., Aug. 11.—Displaying a burst of speed that was simply marvelously and overwhelming the leaders in last quarter, Thomas Hitchcock Jr.'s Salvadore came up from sixth place and won the Saratoga special in a wonderful finish from McCarty. Paul Sane's crack 2-year-old Demund finished in the rack after leading best part of the journey.

In the North American Steeplechase, Alfie, who was coupled with Mackey Dwyer, in the betting, won by a length and a half from Del Cunta. The other feature of the day was the Travers for three-year-olds, in which Gallavant beat Mohawk II, the favorite in the race. Jockey Miller rode four winners and a placed horse.

But he didn't. Seen through the wires the casualty list was something like this:

FISHER PAYS A FINE; LOSES GAME

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 11.—Portland 2, Fresno 0. There was a deaf and dumb man on the Fresno bench today. He wore a toupee, some speckled clothes and a somber air of impenetrable gloom. Said the fans: "It LOOKS like Fisher; it chews tobacco like him, but it doesn't make any noise. It can't be Fisher."

But it was. Just before the game was called Mike approached President Bert and made that august personage a tearful talk. It was about that $100 fine Mike wanted to know whether President Bert would accept his left eye or his right leg or something else as collateral for the century mark.

"Nothing," doing said the president "Come in."

THE MAIN SHOW

So Mike came in—under protest, of course—but he came in, nevertheless. He shook down his garments and after much tearful argument produced the coin of the realm. And that was why there was no noise on the Fresno bench. Mike was mourning his hundred bucks, but the big show was Muscatel Mike, with his sombrero pulled down over his eyes and his pudgy fingers deep in his ravished pockets.

Portland put it on the Turks once more. Twelve hits off Fitzgerald; that tells the story. The Crawfish had hits in every inning but one, while Calif was very stingy with the safe ones. The Turks got five, scattered all over the sheet and the best single of the day was Wolters' star swat to the chutes gate for three bases. But Casey drew to Captain McCredie and a good throw nailed Wolters at the rubber.

CHICAGO, Aug. 11.—The White Sox kept up their phenomenal winning

VICTORY ON BANNERS OF OAKS

SEATTLE, Aug. 11.—Oakland won today's game from Seattle by a margin of one run. Both Jones and Hopkins were batted freely, and though Oakland secured no more hits than Seattle they were better bunched, so that good base running and luck enabled the Athenians to grab the game.

Hopkins made two of Oakland's three errors, and struck out three men, while four Oaklanders fanned out to Jones.

The base hits were plentiful, and Householder and Croll for Seattle, each hammered the sphere for three baggers. Heilmuller and Franks figured in a pretty double play.

NEWS FROM BERKELEY AND CITY OF ALAMEDA

WILL TEACH IRRIGATION

Berkeley Professors Prepare to Instruct Farmers in Branch of Agriculture.

BERKELEY, Aug. 11.—Reading courses in irrigation for the benefit of agriculturalists throughout the state who are unable to get their instruction at the university, direct from the experts employed by the state are being established under the direction of Professor Elwood Mead, the eminent authority on irrigation matters. Literature is being sent out to those who apply, and after being read the farmers are expected to apply in writing to the university men for any supplemental information they may desire.

Professor Mead recommends that reading circles be formed by the farmers. When this is done an entire reference library is sent over the circle. Visits will be made to such circles by a member of the irrigation staff.

The course of reading which farmers are to take will include instruction in irrigation engineering, irrigating institutions and irrigation practice. Under irrigation institutions are included the business and financial methods under which canals are built, how the rights to water are acquired, and conditions on which irrigators are supplied. Irrigation practice includes descriptions of the method of preparing land for irrigation, the cost of preparation, results of measurements to determine amount of water used in irrigation employed in California.

No fees or other charges are to be paid by those who take this reading course in irrigation.

GIRL STAYS DEATH'S HAND

Miss Burnett, of Berkeley, Aids in Preventing Catastrophe in Automobile.

BERKELEY, Aug. 11.—All Berkeley is talking about the narrow escape of the automobile party yesterday as chronicled in THE TRIBUNE this evening.

In the party were Chauffeur H. Hill, James Wyckoff and Miss Mildred Burnett.

MILDRED BURNETT, Who Is Gleeft Over Her Escape From Death in An Automobile Yesterday.

The extraordinary experiment used by the chauffeur in stopping the machine when the brakes refused to work by turning the lever, has caused no end of talk among the people of the college town and the coolness and presence of mind of the manipulator of the machine have brought him no little commendation.

Wyckoff, who is a real estate man, was driving Miss Burnett through Berkeley in search of a home to purchase. The automobile had reached one of the highest points in the residential portion of Berkeley at the end of Euclid avenue hill. After remaining there for a time inspecting a house, the party started on the down grade. They had gone but a short distance when they discovered that the brakes refused to work.

MOMENTUM INCREASES.
The power was shut off and everything done to stop the machine, which was gradually going faster and faster, but all to no avail. The streets were kept clear of pedestrians by the shouting of the occupants of the automobile. It was not until the machine had nearly reached the bottom of the hill that the chauffeur thought of his novel scheme, which proved entirely successful. Now Hill is the hero of the town.

Miss Burnett said shortly after the experience "Yes, it was a thrilling ride, and several times I was almost on the point of jumping to save my life, but of course I am glad now that I did not, as I might have been seriously injured. It certainly was a clever thought of the chauffeur's to turn the reverse lever, and I am extremely happy to have got out of the escapade so easy."

GIRL'S SHARE IN RIDE.
Miss Burnett, none the worse for her thrilling experience, received the congratulations of her friends today upon her narrow escape from death. She held the wheel of the flying car as it sped down the steep grade of Euclid avenue, and by her skill and daring kept all the occupants of the automobile from death.

The feat has elicited the admiration of every automobile enthusiast in Berkeley, all of them knowing the extreme danger of a coast down the steep incline of Euclid avenue.

Miss Burnett is a granddaughter of former Governor Peter Burnett, one of the earliest executives of the State of California. She is a graduate of Mills college, who later took up the stage, and after her health failed, entered the risky business in Berkeley.

APPOINTS DEPUTY.
FRUITVALE, Aug. 12.—Coroner H. E. Mehrmann has appointed Arthur A. Barber, Deputy Coroner for Fruitvale. Mr. Barber conducts an undertaking business at 314 East Fourteenth street near Fruitvale avenue. He is known to be competent. Mr. Barber's appointment has been in effect since August 1st.

Paul Thierieux, leader of the Sauto Band in San Francisco, has made arrangements to build a bandstand on the Derby property, at East Fourteenth street, and Fruitvale avenue. Concerts will be given every Saturday night.

At the last meeting of the Republican Club, $12.50 was collected to improve the Fire House on Bassett street. The Carpenters Union, which has changed its meeting place from room above the Postoffice, to the fire house, will contribute $25 or $30 towards the repairs.

Aerie 1375, F. O. E., gave a ball last Wednesday evening. The music was furnished by members, and the affair was a very enjoyable one.

Mr. John Bridge, representing the lodge, left Wednesday, for Niagara, to attend the Grand Aerie of the order.

BERKELEY, Aug. 11.—James B. Coffey, a mail collector, quit the government service this afternoon, and his resignation was the last straw which Postmaster Schmidt proposed to bear. Coffey is the fourth man to leave the postoffice during the last two months. The office is so seriously crippled by these resignations that mail matter is neither delivered nor collected with dispatch.

Congressman Knowland conferred with Postmaster George Schmidt this afternoon and the two sent a joint telegram to the postal authorities in Washington describing the situation and begging for relief. Her father is a wealthy stockman of Kings county.

The pair became acquainted after the fire in San Francisco when Gerson was attracted by the spectacle of the girl's composure while cooking at a street fire. The acquaintance ripened into love and marriage was proposed. The groom's people are of the Jewish faith and objection was made to the difference in religion. The young people cut the gordian knot by having another sort of knot tied.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Taylor of the Methodist church in Redwood city, and the pair then came to Berkeley, where they resided with a friend of the bride's, Miss Eva Corn wall of 2230 Chapel street. They will make their home in the Carlton hotel when that structure is completed.

CONSTANCE CROWLEY AT GREEK THEATER.

BERKELEY, Aug. 11.—Constance Crowley, formerly a member of the Ben Greek company, and her company, will play "A Midsummer Night's Dream" in the Greek theater in about three weeks. Final arrangements are now being made, and the exact date will be announced in a few days. The moon is full early in September, an some evening will be chosen so that this play may be given by moonlight which will be the most favorable conditions imaginable. The university orchestra, under the leadership of Prof. Wolfe, will render Mendelssohn's accompaniment to the play.

ANTE-MARRIAGE SCHEME.

BERKELEY, Aug. 11.—Captain E. J. Martin is to explain his proposed ante nuptial contract law, which he desires the legislature to adopt, to the women of the Political Equality club at their annual meeting at the residence of Mrs. William Keith, 2207 Atherton street, next Wednesday afternoon. Officers of the club will be elected at the time.

Captain Martin proposes that persons planning marriage should execute a contract before marriage, arranging for a division of property and income. He believes that such a course will promote domestic harmony and minimize divorces.

BERLIN PARIS LONDON AND MADRID

QUEEN DRESSES STORE WINDOWS

Has a Dainty Little Store in Paris and Gives Profits to the Poor.

PARIS, Aug. 11.—Aristocratic shopkeepers have long since become a drug in the market, but this city can now boast of a truly royal shop.

Queen Maria Sophia of Naples has just started a dainty little store in the Rue St. Roch. It is called Aux Ouvrages Calabrais, and is devoted entirely to the sale of needlework done by the Calabria and peasant women.

The queen has opened in Calabria workshops where the peasant women, who had been reduced to misery by the terrible earthquake of last year, make the lace and embroideries which are sold in the Paris shops. The proceeds of the sale go to help poor people rebuild their homes.

Almost daily Queen Maria Sophia, who is also queen of the two Sicilies and of Jerusalem, Duchess of Parma, of Plaisance, and Castro, and grand duchess of Bavaria and Tuscany, comes to the little store and superintends the window dressing.

To the casual onlooker she is but a charming woman who takes an interest in the work, and none would know that she was a queen if the attendants did not call her "majesty."

SPANISH BULL FIGHTS ARE EXPENSIVE

MADRID, Aug. 11.—Here is a bill of expenses of a bull fight, lately held for charitable purposes. For that reason, the costs were less than usual, but even so they seem to justify the high prices of admission asked in Madrid.

Their feed in transit	150
Horses gored by the bulls	800
Employees of the bull ring	80

GERMAN ROYAL FAMILY NEARLY ALL PRINCES

BERLIN, Aug. 11.—The imperial family of Germany has no fewer than nineteen male members nearly all of them big strapping fellows large for their age excepting the youngest, the crown princess baby. The oldest of the princes is Albert, regent of Brunswick who is 59 years old. Then follow the Kaiser born in 1859, Prince Henry born in 1862 and Frederick Leopold born in 1865. The other members are aged respectively 32, 30, 28, 23, 23, 20 and 18 years. The rest are between 1 and 10 years old. With such an avalanche of male princes there is little hope that Germany will become a republic in the present century.

GRIEVE WITH LORD CURZON

Many Expressions of Sympathy Come to Bereaved English Nobleman.

LONDON, Aug. 11.—From three continents heartfelt expressions of sympathy will come to Lord Curzon. Never probably has the wife of any private individual won more universal admiration than the gifted woman who in the prime of her youth and her beauty has been taken away from him.

Never probably, has any woman succeeded in astonishing England more completely or in disappointing the many critics who believed that she would be incapable of fulfilling the great responsibility which fell to her lot.

Her innate refinement and her quick intuition fitted her at once for the position she was called to occupy, and that truly was no easy one. Lord Curzon, capable, clever already a man of mark when he married, needed a wife who was competent to enter into the wider sphere of usefulness which would undoubtedly be his, and Lady Curzon glided so unobtrusively into her place that it seemed as though she was born to fill her part in the responsibility of his high office.

But it was in her home life that Lady Curzon was most delightful. A story was told in India which was extremely characteristic of her. She looked forward from time to time to the days when she could leave the burden of public life and retire to the hills with her little girls.

One Sunday she was not with them in church but pointed them there later and the children, who adored their mother rose instantly from their seats and regardless of the congregation, rushed down the aisle with wide open arms to greet her as though she had entered their nursery. It is little wonder that thousands share the grief and are filled with personal sorrow that such a bond should be now severed.

BUBONIC PLAGUE IS FEARED IN HAVRE

PARIS, Aug. 11.—Much nervousness has been felt in Paris lest the bubonic plague which has broken out in Havre, should spread to this city. The authorities, however, are very reassuring in their reports that Paris is in no danger. Only one fatal case has so far occurred in the French port. Dr. Renaud of Paris, the celebrated authority on bubonic plague, says there is no fear for Parisians.

According to the contract arranged with the society which built the Eiffel tower, that monstrous erection is to become the property of the city in 1910. It is still some years off, but the question has already been discussed as to whether or not it should disappear from the landscape when this period arrives.

PRINCE OLAF FETTERED BY THE COUNTRY PEOPLE ON HIS WAY TO TRONDHJEM.

Little Olaf, on Way to Coronation, Makes a Tour of a Hill Farm With a Little Peasant Girl for Guide.

CHRISTIANIA, Aug. 11.—Norway's heir, little Prince Olaf, has recently been among the people of the fjords and Saeters and on his way to Trondhjem, was much fettered by the country people. As the royal party were proceeding to Trondhjem to the coronation he was made a great deal of, and at one of the farms he was taken in charge by a little girl who led him about and showed him the various animals on the place. Among all the stock the crown prince was most delighted with a kid which he viewed with apparent wonderment. The cut above represents him being held by the girl while interested parties on the farm are looking on.

For one of his years, the little prince took an unusual interest in the beautiful scenery about him and was loathe to leave the farming community for the more thickly settled sections thereabouts.

mirers as the "Belgian Shakespeare."

M. Maeterlinck who is still a young man has resided for a number of years in this city but lives somewhat retired and is not often seen in society.

MILLIONAIRES WERE FRIENDS

When They First Met Beit and Rhodes Agreed on a Working Partnership.

LONDON, Aug. 11.—The two men who were made by South Africa, and who in turn really made South Africa, are dead, but the memory of their deeds, the power and influence of their wealth remains behind them. Together these two men, Cecil Rhodes and Alfred Beit, possessed almost $500,000,000. This enormous wealth has practically been consolidated and is now devoted to educational projects and the furtherance and promotion of British influence in South Africa.

Beit and Rhodes were great friends in life, and when Beit died recently it was a foregone conclusion that his will would reveal almost identical terms to that of Rhodes.

The story of the first meeting of Beit and Rhodes and the ripening of that friendship which was to continue until death, is now being circulated in London. It is as follows.

According to the latter, he called at Beit's and there saw Beit hard at work. Asked what his name was, Beit answered, "I am going to control the whole diamond output before I am much older."

To this Rhodes is said to have replied, "That's funny, I have made up my mind to do the same thing. We had better join hands." This they promptly did and the British chartered company of South Africa, which helped to add Rhodesia to the English empire, was one of the results. Since that time the men became millionaires and have figured in every move that influenced the destinies of Britain's African empire.

HUSBAND'S BABES HER SOUVENIRS

PARIS, Aug. 11.—Countess Lamourous, wife of the well known sportsman and aristocrat, received a perfume note the other morning which read as follows:

"Madam, I have the honor to return to your care a few of the souvenirs your husband deigned to leave at my house when he took his departure a week ago. I would esteem it a favor if you would send back the carriage at once, as I have a rehearsal to attend at noon."

The note was signed with the name of a famous actress and the carriage contained two lovely little children, living pictures of Count Lamourous.

RIDDER WILL WRITE ESSAY

Subject Matter Concerns "Royal Princes" in America and Abroad.

KIEL, Aug. 11.—There is a rumor that Herman Ridder, editor of the New York Staats-Zeitung, will publish a story entitled, "Royal Princes in the United States and at Home—the Discrepancy," the essay to appear as soon as Ridder is safely out of the land-majesty district.

Ridder, it will be remembered, arranged a grand dinner for Prince Henry when the latter visited New York. In recognition of this courtesy he was given a royal Prussian decoration worth $165 and an invitation to call on Henry whenever he visited the fatherland. Accordingly, Ridder notified the prince of his arrival the moment he struck German soil and his response received a document, one-half of it covered with crests and decorations.

The engraved request read as follows: "His royal highness, Prince Henry of Prussia, admiral of the fleet, designs to command Herr Herman Ridder of New York to audience at the Kiel palace next Monday, at 7 a. m. Dress Full dress."

As Ridder, when in evening dress, closely resembles a prize fighter, he didn't like the condition imposed, but bravely donned his swallow-tail and pumps, white tie and all, on the morning set, not forgetting to pin a decoration or two to his swelling bosom. He was conducted into the midst of a large apartment, furnished with a dozen chairs standing along the walls. As for Hermann, he was told to stay under the chandeliers, about thirty feet removed from the nearest seat. He stood there for twenty-five minutes when the prince walked in leisurely, and, consulting a paper in his hand read aloud.

"Herr Hermann Ridder of New York seeks an audience. Ah, very well. Do you prefer to talk in English or German?"

The disenchanted Ridder recalled to him, M. H. that they had talked a lot of German together on the other side, but the prince seemingly had forgotten the pleasant episode and continued to treat Ridder like a person fallen from the skies, and at the same time keeping him on his legs. The prince discovered absent-mindedly about Kiel harbor, the Hamburg St. Michael's church and the price of horses, but not a word of the Waldorf-Astoria and the more he met there and in other parts of the United States. So, after ten minutes of forced conversation, Ridder bowed low and said in a voice choked with anger and disappointment: "I am afraid I am intruding upon your royal highness time and will withdraw."

"As you please, Herr Ridder," replied Prince Henry, and turning on his heel to the court marshal standing at the door "Next." This barbarous farewell hurt Ridder more than anything the prince had said or omitted to say, and he left the palace a wiser but sadder man. If he ever wears the Kaiser's decoration again it will be at the Arion masquerade, or, perhaps, at the French ball.

FRIENDSHIP HID DEADLY PLOT

Girl Who Intended to Murder Russian General Was Guest of His Children.

ODESSA, Aug. 11.—It was learned from official sources today that Barbara Printz, daughter of Lieutenant General Printz who yesterday made an attempt to enter the palace of Governor General Kaulbars with a bomb hidden in her reticule, arrived here a week ago from Warsaw on invitation of the daughters of General Kaulbars with whom she was educated. She frequented the general's house daily watching him closely and preparing to make an attempt on his life. Papers found in her room proved that Mile Printz belonged to the terrorist section of the social revolutionists and that she came to Odessa commanded to execute a sentence of death imposed by them on the general. The bomb was of extraordinary power and capable of destroying the general's palace.

General Printz commands the Warsaw military academy.

POLICE AT SEA OVER MURDER

Can Not Find Guilty Ones in Temescal Canyon Crime.

SANTA MONICA, Aug. 11.—Acting upon the theory that the young woman found murdered in Temescal canyon was brought from the beach officers and detectives are carrying their investigation into the vicinity of Calabasas a few miles above here. They believe midnight revels that have taken place there may afford a clew to the solution of the puzzle.

The identity of the woman with Percy Horton when he found the body is being traced. Horton's itinerary of the trip down the beach and his return home, is also being tabulated. Search in the canyon, after the brush in the vicinity had been removed added nothing to the meagre clews beyond confirming the theory that the body had been sitting in the canyon ever since the death, or at least a few hours afterward. The laundry marks on the garments, so far, have not aided in identification.

CRIPPLES ARE TO HAVE SCHOOL OF THEIR OWN

PARIS, Aug. 11.—At Charleroi in Belgium a professional school is being established for people who have been injured in accidents and are not able to earn their livelihood in the usual way. They are to be divided into two general classes—those who have the use of their legs and those who have not—and these will be subdivided into those who have some education and the perfectly illiterate. The class of industry known as home work is to be taught, and as much of the expense as possible is to be met by the produce of the sales, the rest being borne by the state.

SULTAN TOO SICK TO GO TO PRAYERS

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 11.—The Sultan, who has been ill for three weeks was unable to attend the Selamluk yesterday. This is unprecedented, the Sultan never having failed to perform the Friday prayers during the thirty years of his reign. Itty of the Sultan to attend the Selamluk was due to the extreme pain he is suffering and not to the fact that his condition is grave. Professor Bergmann, the famous German surgeon, has been summoned to attend him and it is presumed that a slight operation is necessary.

- $30,000 Six modern flats and 4 small stores on the corner of 10th and Webster streets. This property is now bringing about 10 per cent net and could be made to pay more when some of the leases have expired, which will be in a short time. This is the lowest price that this property has ever been offered for and values in this district have increased at least 25 per cent in the last 60 days. There is no doubt but that this part of town has a great future and the buyer of this corner would have an excellent prospect of doubling the investment price in two or three years.
- $5600 Fine old home place, corner 65x140, with large 11-room house. It has been remodeled and modernized, large sunny rooms, running water in each sleeping room, splendid shade trees and shrubbery, also large barn and good well with windmill and tank. This is located on 5th avenue, three blocks to S. P. station, and within walking distance of business center.
- $4250 Southeast corner of 32nd and Grove, 123x80. This price has been reduced and is far below the price of any similar property in this vicinity.
- $3750 Lot 50x75 on Grove street, near 8th, good 2-room house, but we are not charging anything for the house as this is barely the price of the ground. This house is suitable for a rooming or boarding house and would rent for from $60 to $80 a month.
- $3650 Modern and attractive bungalow of 7 rooms, also a large barn; lot 32x130. This house is in every way a desirable home and is located on Aggar street, near Grove.
- $3600 One of the finest building sites on Adams Point; 90 feet frontage on Lenox avenue. This land commands one of the finest views to be had at any point on this side of the bay. Anyone wishing to build a high class home could hardly find a more desirable spot. This price is low, considering the location.
- $3100 Two flats of 5 and 6 rooms, bath and gas. This building is only 5 years old and is in good condition, will rent for $10 a month or more, lot 32-1-2x125, with room for driveway and barn, on Elbert street, near 24th street. This can be rented or resold at a handsome profit.
- $3000 Good cottage of 6 rooms and bath; gas and stationary wash-tubs, also artesian water; lot 40x100, on 9th street, near Pe-raita. This house is in first class condition and well worth the money.
- $2750 Two-story house of 9 rooms and bath; Southern exposure; on a lot 50x140, with a barn and a driveway, located on East 21st street. It is only a 10 minutes' ride to 12th and Broadway. $150 cash, balance $15 a month, including interest.
- $2600 Two flats, 6 rooms each, modern plumbing and in good condition, lot 32x125, on Adeline, near 30th. These will easily rent for $20 a month. Call at once if you wish to investigate this property before it is sold, as investments like this are being sought for.
- $2650 Large 2-story, 7-room house, modern and in first class condition, lot 30x125, on 22nd street, near 20th. This is a new 5th street Key Route line. Property in this district is increasing in value rapidly. We have an option on this place which has held the price down, therefore we can give the buyer the advantage of the increase in value.
- $2450 Nearly new 5-room cottage, with bath and reception hall; fine mantel and decorated walls. This is a finished and complete home for a very small price. It is located in a very desirable part of East Oakland, street work done, lot 35x100.
- $2250 Six-room house, with bath and gas, nearly new and in first class condition, lot 32x125, with chicken house and yard. It is convenient to trains and cars.
- $2550 Two-story house with 3 rooms and bath, lot 30x100, located on Santa Fe avenue near San Pablo, street work done. This lot is worth $800, and the house could not be built for less than $200, making this a $600 profit.
- $1600 This fine corner 160x100, on 63rd street. This is only $10 a foot, could be subdivided and sold at $15 per foot, or better. Anyone with a little money to invest could build out-pace here and sell them at a good profit, and could sell them before they were completed, as the demand for new cottages is very strong.
- $1500 A good 5-room cottage located on Adams street, convenient to Key Route station and local train, lot 25x125.
- $950 For a few days only, a beautiful home site, 30x125, on Pe-raita Heights overlooking Lake Merritt. This is a snap; it is worth more, but price is reduced for quick sale.
- $650 Lot 35x120, high ground, in choice district, street work done. This is on 15th street, near 12th avenue.
- $400 Lot 25x100 on B street, near Hannah. This is desirable high ground and only one block from Key Route station, $200 cash and balance in as much time as desired.
- $3000 An elegant little Fruitvale home, a modern house of 6 rooms, including one room, the basement, also two rooms in the back house. This place has a good well with windmill and tank, this saving water rent. Lot 43x125, with a variety of fruit bearing trees and berry vines. The owner has been offered $45,000 and will sell the place for only three or four days it will be rented and withdrawn from the market.
- $4000 Only $4000 for this elegant 7-room, new colonial house, situated on a fine corner 37x114 on Grove street. This house was built for a home and no expense was spared to make it complete in every way. The price has been reduced to force a quick sale. Do not fail to see this.

HOW A BOSTON GIRL

Passing of a famous Shaker colony

BECAME A SHOE DEALER

MISS LYNCH, SHOE DEALER.

This is the true story of how Minnie Lynch of East Boston bought her shoe store, says the Post of that city. It is the story of how a plucky young woman bought out her employer when she didn't have a cent in the world. It tells of a girl who lived through opposition, criticism and social ostracism for her ambition and how she finally came out triumphant. It deals with the vital moment in this girl's life and shows how she won over family and popular prejudice, proving to friend and foe alike that when a woman will she will, and that neither conventionality nor gossip can prevent her from realizing her heart's desire. But listen to her own relating of the story:

ENTERS A SHOE STORE.

"When I left school I entered this store as a clerk for Mr. Parmenter and worked for him three and a half years. The trade was splendid, I personally controlling quite a share of it, as both my parents and myself were born on the island. In fact, my name was printed on the window below that of my employer's."

"I was brought up and educated by the sisters of Notre Dame, played in the East Boston Mandolin and Glee Club, played the piano in another club and was a leading member of the Catholic Amateur Dramatic Society. On my graduation from the convent, my father was ambitious to have me take up an advanced course in music and become a concert player. My sister also plays well, and our friends thought we would do well in public as a sister team in some musical sketch. But I had no inclinations in that way, my sole desire being to get into mercantile work and to help my parents. Unknown to them I applied for my position and was engaged immediately. This necessitated the giving up of my special studies, but I continued to play at the clubs, appear in theatricals and go out nights to dances and all that with my girl friends."

"So successful was I with Mr. Parmenter that another merchant made me a better offer of money and shorter hours, and I took it. My old employer tried to keep me, but wouldn't raise my salary. When he saw I was determined to leave, he said: 'If you ever want to return, Minnie, remember your position is waiting for you.'"

"This was the turning point in my affairs. My new employer did not keep his word, and I found myself working longer and harder than I ever dreamed a person could. Finally, things became too unpleasant, and I left. Naturally, I wouldn't give my reasons to the folks at home for going, nor would I go near my old employer. He kept sending for me, but, you see, the girl that had taken my place was a friend of mine. I wouldn't have anything to do with the world, people, or anything after all my experience. I wasn't worth an advance, I might as well quit the business first as last."

"To please my parents, I took up my music with renewed vigor and apparently had given up all thoughts of boots and shoes. I went out socially again, and at a Jewish wedding one night met the son of my old employer."

OFFERED A CHANCE TO BUY.

"Father is going to sell out," he said. "Of course, I was surprised."

"Why don't you step in and see him?" he asked.

"Because it doesn't interest me to," I said.

"Well, he wants to see you," he replied. "He wants to sell out to you."

"Naturally, I laughed at the idea, but

I thought it would be no harm to call on him and the next day I did.

"Why don't you come back and work for me, Minnie?" he said. "The trade is all gone since you left."

"I want a better job than you can offer me," I said. "I was dying to get back, but always kept thinking of my friend."

"Well, then," said he, "if you won't work for me, why don't you buy me out?"

"What do you mean, Mr. Parmenter? You know I haven't a cent in the world."

"You haven't your folks something to sell?"

"If they have," I said, "they wouldn't give it to be to buy this business, but for they don't want me in it. They want me at home."

"Well, they are foolish," he went on to say. "If I had a son or daughter that knew as much about the shoe business as you do, I would be the happiest man alive. Go home and just state the case to them and come back and tell me what they agree to."

"I knew it was no use, but I went. My father told me the responsibility of the thing would kill me, and he never let him hear me say another word about it. Mother sympathized with me, but agreed with my father."

"Stay at your music, Minnie," she said. "So I went and told him it was of no use, I couldn't have the store."

"Since they are all against you, Minnie," he said, "and because I know you will make a success of it, I will tell you how you can buy me out without a dollar. Come in and work for me six months, and at the end of that time, if you decide to buy, pay me one-half the valuation of the place and then $100 a month until the store is paid for. The only thing you must be determined on at the end of that time is whether you can buy or not. Is that satisfactory?"

"Let me think it over a bit," he said. "I'll let you know my decision in a few days. Home to my parents again I went, and my father put his foot down hard."

"Stay out of it," he said. "You have absolutely no money; you will borrow and lose everything, and then what will you do? It is too big an undertaking for a girl."

TONGUES OF GOSSIP WAG.

"Next I asked the advice of different friends and met with no answer."

It becomes the country estate of a wealthy mine owner

MEMBERS OF AN EXTINGUISHED SHAKER COLONY.

"Fernside," the picturesque colony of the quaint Shakers near Lenox and Stockbridge, is no more, says the Boston Post.

Its oddly dressed men and women have all gone their way—some to Enfield, N. H., and some to Canterbury—and where once they sold their wares, their baskets of herbs and aprons and their famous "Dorothy" opera capes, held their strange services and lived their strange lives, men and women of wealth and fashion will soon dwell and make merry, for the purchaser of the beautiful estate is William B. Dingwell, a wealthy Englishman, who intends to convert it to a perfectly equipped English hunting box, with abundantly stocked preserves.

Mr. Dingwell, who was in this country on business connected with his Mexican mine interests, first heard of Fernside, while visiting in Lenox, and lost no time in purchasing it.

Abandoned by the Shakers, who chose to go and unite with the much larger settlements or "families" at Enfield and Canterbury, the estate, consisting of 1000 acres, laid out as farm and pasture land, with two large houses and several cottages, barns and little stores, has lovely shaded lanes, little rustic bridges, crossing the streams of gurgling water, and fine fishing pools.

Already plans have been made to still further add to the beauty of the place, and soon it will be transformed into something vastly more beautiful and attractive than ever before, and the Shaker settlement of the past will be forgotten just as surely as the strange sect is dying out.

FOUNDING THE COLONY OF FERNSIDE.

It is many years since these oddly garbed people came to Berkshire county and, settling in various places, founded Fernside and made it famous.

From Lenox, Pittsfield and all the pretty towns of the Berkshires summer visitors eagerly took the long ride to the little town of Tyringham, at the foot of one of the mountains, where Fernside and its Shakers were the one objective point.

Stories of their queer doing, their lives committed to celibacy, their religious services, of which a sort of dance is said to be a feature, and their anticipation of the millennium, and many other things, drew people out of mere curiosity, who went again to buy their exquisite needle work, baskets of herbs, and many homely, useful articles sold in the little Shaker shops.

Often the Shaker women, and sometimes the men, too, went forth into the world of "unbelievers," and in the high-priced hotels of the fashionable summer resorts throughout the Berkshire hills sold, at a goodly profit, their handiwork.

They mingled there with worldly folk, who rose at 10 instead of 4, and dined at 7 instead of 12, and supped at 12 instead of 6, and having filled their pockets with worldly dollars, retired once more to their quiet farmhouse.

Here they lived in two big houses, the men sleeping in one end of the house, the women in the other, while at the table, too, then men always sat at one end and the women at the other. The settlement was in charge of four elders—two men and two women—who were the persons in authority.

When a person became a member of the Shaker settlement, he or she had to confess all sins to one of the elders, who had, as they believed, power to forgive the sinner.

HAD TO GIVE UP EVERYTHING.

Upon joining, the Shaker covenant must be signed, and the signer agreed to give to God life, time, service and treasure.

Those visitors who were allowed to stop and eat with the Shakers saw that they always knelt both before and after each meal, and ate in silence.

The food was good and wholesome, for many fresh vegetables were raised on the farm, both to be sold and eaten. One thing noticeable was that the Shakers never ate pork nor used tobacco or liquors unless absolutely necessary in case of illness.

Every Shaker has a trade. The women do all kinds of needlework, and, as no servants are employed, do all the work that a woman can do in a home.

ALL KNOW A TRADE.

The men tilled the fields and aided the women in upholstering quaint pieces of furniture, usually carved by themselves, and sold for a goodly price.

The medicinal herbs and old-fashioned garden seeds sold by these Shakers are famous the world over for their virtue and quality.

Many of them are skillful inventors. It was the Shakers who invented the brushroom; the first buzz saw, metallic pens and cut nails were also their inventions.

Shaker shirts for men are as popular as their Dorothy capes of Shaker gray for women, which have gone the world over.

Rising at 4 and working two hours before breakfast, the Shakers of Fernside supped at 6, and before going to bed at 10 held their religious services.

In the settlement were a number of children, some of whom had been sent to the settlement by their fathers and mothers, who did not always live there, but who, if they did, were obliged to live their lives quite apart from each other, and not at all as if they were man and wife, for at Fernside, as at all other Shaker communities, the matrimonial tie was not recognized.

ACCUSED OF ILL-TREATING CHILDREN.

Years ago there were many complaints of the Shakers and their abuse of children, many claiming that children were beaten black and blue if they did not obey with sufficient promptness, and that they were forced to undergo many trials, such as sitting bolt upright in a chair without leaning back for certain periods of time, during which, if they whispered or did other than keep a strict silence, they were forced to stand up and bow three times to the elder, and then confess their wrongdoing.

Many people petitioned the Legislature of New York and New Hampshire to investigate the alleged abuse and find some redress, and bills were presented to further protect the rights of married women and children, with a view to Shaker women and children especially, but they never passed both houses.

The petitioners of those days fought strenuously and the Shakers, in turn, were represented by a long array of most brilliant lawyers of the day, including Franklin Pierce, Josiah Quincy and William C. Prescott.

They won their case, after a fiercely contested investigation, which stirred the whole of New England, and called wide attention to their peculiar sect.

Since that time, however, the Shakers have diminished in number. Gradually settlements once large and flourishing, an attraction for miles wide, have dwindled and then disappeared, people either dying off or leaving to re-enter the world without, or going to merge into one of the three large settlements at Canterbury, Enfield and New Lebanon, N. Y., which is chief of them all.

agement. 'Parmenter is doping you,' they said. 'I know the business,' I told them, 'and can see my way clear,' but I took their advice and stayed away from the store."

My former employer sent for me again. 'I can sell out today, spot cash,' Minnie, he said. 'What is your answer?'

"Sell," I said. "father will not let me buy, although I told him my heart and soul is in it."

"You shall have it," he said. "You bring some trustworthy friend as a witness to my terms with you, and we will make it a private sale. Tell no one but the one you bring along."

"Then I went to a friend, a man who was known to my folks before I was born. He was a long-headed business man, and I laid the plan out before him."

"You would be a fool not to jump at it," he said, and he consented to act as witness to the sale. Mr. Parmenter made the terms plain to him. 'If at the end of the six months she can't pay me, all she will have to do is to let the store go. We neither of us lose anything, and it gives her a chance to secure a good business.'

"So on February 28, 1904, I signed the papers. The name of the store was never changed, and people only thought that I was driven into going back to work for my old employer."

"Let them think what they please," he said; 'you know whom you are working for.' From 8 in the morning until 11 at night I toiled. I was so tired at night I felt only like going to my bed."

"Why don't you come to the club now, Minnie?" my friends would say. 'I'm too busy,' was all I would answer. 'You haven't any more to do than before,' they would answer. But I had to give up the piano, mandolin, dramatics and all.

"At the end of the six months I got my notice from the bank that my note was due. Mr. Parmenter's brother was my indorser. I took it up and met every expense connected with the place. I kept the girl who had entered in my place, raising her salary $2, and was getting along splendidly. I would have had the business all paid for in two years, had a drummer not imposed upon me. Only for that, and the girl's eyes grew big with excitement, 'I should have been able to have cleared myself of some gossip that my own girl friends started about me.'

"Wait until my store is paid for and I will write a story and tell how I bought it," I would say. They started such mean stories about me!

DISTRESSING TRIALS.

"I had told one girl chum that the real reason I could not get to the club, etc., was because I was buying the place. She told another, and so the story spread. I told her all about the private sale and mentioned the name of the man who acted as witness of the sale. What do you suppose they did?"

"One day I was dressing my window, when this man came in. I saw he was worried, and finally he told me his trouble. 'But don't you let the gossip worry you, Minnie,' he said. 'I shall see that you come out all right.'

"I replied. 'What have I to do with it?'

"Haven't you heard?' he answered. 'Heard what?' I asked.

"Why, they say that I bought the business for you and that my wife has left me in consequence."

"I was dumb with amazement, and for a moment couldn't think. The girl clerk heard all he said; she had been witness to Mr. Parmenter's offer to me."

and knew all the details of the affair. 'I have not been in business for myself a month yet,' I said, 'but I will give my store up. They shall see if I have been wrong in any way.'

"You won't do any such thing," he said. 'If I had sold property to buy this business for you, I wouldn't let my wife have to sign the bill of sale? If any money had passed my hands into Parmenter's, wouldn't she have to know it? Wait and let this blow over.'

"Then the gossips went to the parish priest. He came to me, and when I told him my story, showed him the notes and he understood it clearly; he told me to let all the gossip go in one ear and out of the other. He said that he admired my pluck and was amazed at my courage in putting through such a deal."

"Then they went to the sisters. They declared that I ought to be expelled from the church societies. But the sisters knew me. I had received my training at their hands, took my first communion with them and left their convent to enter this store. They told me to have patience, to struggle on and that all would come out right."

"Later the man's wife returned to her husband. When she heard the dreadful lies circulated, she felt so badly for me that their little difference was made up. It has made me ten years older. Of course, my parents suffered terribly through it all. They knew where I was every minute, and the bank folks had ample proof that I alone met my notes. They could show that no money had been paid down."

"I felt all this gossip bitterly, but I just sat and waited."

did not allow it to make me morbid.

"It is strange how the merchants treat me since they know I am in business for myself. No one was more popular than I when I worked as a clerk, but they resent competition from a girl. When Mr. Parmenter took my sister and me to the wholesale dealers to introduce me, they didn't take me seriously. My going into the boot and shoe business was a sort of joke to them, but now, when I go in they put themselves out to get things for me. I was the first girl and am still the only one in this business."

"My first year was very successful, the average trade being about $60 a day; but the tunnel has ruined the transient trade, as we call it—the trade from Winthrop and so on. Many go through to Boston and the big stores. Still, I do a good business. The store would be clear of debt only for that drummer and his bad goods. Still, one has to pay to learn in this world."

"Father says the worry and talk have made me over completely. It was quite an undertaking, I know, but I am not sorry I made the plunge."

One has some interesting experiences in a shoe store. There is, for example, the visitor who drops in and says: 'What have you got in tennis shoes?' My boy is stuck on them, but I like sneakers better. What have you got in sneakers? But, then, he wears out six of them to one of shoes. What have you got in a canvas shoe? But they ain't no good. What do you figure on getting for them? But they are so narrow in the sole, anyway. It's awful hard to get anything for boys, I guess I'll let him stop in and suit himself. I know these kind, so never bother with them. They are just out hitting them."

HOW GIRL STUDENTS PAY THEIR WAY THROUGH COLLEGE

"Just leave your shoes outside the door and I will polish them for you," said a senior at a well-known woman's college to a wealthy young freshman at the beginning of the term.

The newcomer was somewhat startled. She wanted to have her shoes polished, but she feared a janitor would be around to do the work. Instead, here was a fine-looking, self-respecting schoolmate offering to polish her shoes.

As she became better acquainted with college life and conditions, the younger girl ceased to regard the offer made by her senior as remarkable. She found a number of girls in the school who were adding to their finances by selling their talents or their labors.

She found, too, that such girls were as highly respected by their comrades as the petted daughter of a millionaire—in many instances more so.

So little, in fact, does the aristocracy of wealth hold at most such institutions that an incident at Wellesley may be cited as an illustration.

It is stated that a college bootblack there—she was one of the best pupils in school—one day found herself overwhelmed with commissions.

Her roommate, a wealthy girl, who, doubtless, had never shined her own shoes in her life, rolled up her sleeves, picked in to help, and never ceased plying the polishing brush until the are thus employed have high standing in their work.

Some years ago a visitor at Vassar found in the senior class alone twenty-five girls who had thus helped themselves through school, while a large number were scattered through the lower classes.

The college itself, it was learned, had several positions to offer which gave some remuneration. Two girls had charge of the institution's postoffice, and several others distributed mail through the corridors. One was caretaker of the chapel, another kept the hall and parlors supplied with flowers, still others worked in the library.

Those of artistic tastes or practical endowments made money by painting dinner cards, calendars, valentines and other such seasonable articles; some derived a revenue from knitting slippers and golf jackets, others by making gymnasium suits.

As the college is some distance from the town a number of girls pick up handy additional revenue by acting as agents for merchants. They sell candy, lace collars, ribbon, and even room furnishings.

Mount Holyoke girls seem to acquire thriftiness from the brick New England air that they breathe. During the summer vacations, many of them work to replenish their purses for the fast shoe was cleaned and shining.

Then the two girls washed their hands and went merrily together to a college entertainment.

It is estimated that at least fifty girls of Vassar earn their own living, or, at least, add largely to limited resources. In fact, some do such thriving businesses that not only do they make their way through college, but have substantial sums left at the end of each school year.

Several girls tutor their rich sisters; others began making pink-a-boo shirtwaists when that particular type of garment came into vogue. They reaped quite a harvest.

A number of students own bicycles, and they post notices on a big bulletin board in one of the corridors, along with other advertisements, announcing that the wheels are for rent by the hour. Quite a nice little revenue is derived in this way.

Two young women have built up a paying business through their expertness in making a tasty apple custard. These young women tried their wares when they first came to college, and soon there was a great demand for them. Now stands in front of their rooms are laden with these delicacies, and the girls, as they pass by, take a cup and leave a dime.

Several dollars a day find their way into the pocketbooks of the young caterers. Vassar has a large room provided with stoves, tables and utensils for cooking and making candy. A great many girls manufacture confections there—especially fudge. This is on sale at stated places and nets the makers considerable profit.

The richer girls seem to appreciate the efforts of their less fortunate classmates, and many a time twice the price of an article is paid.

No girl has ever been known to lose caste in Vassar through her efforts to pay her way, but rather she becomes a favorite with her classmates. All who coming season. Some act as waitresses at mountain and seaside hotels during the summer.

Girls at Mount Holyoke are agents for publishing houses and magazines, and occasionally for manufacturers of gloves, corsets and such things.

It is stated, however, that most of them take up these side lines more in order to secure pin money than for the purpose of paying their scholastic way.

Domestic work is incumbent upon the girls at Mount Holyoke. This system is a survival of the days when higher education for women was in its infancy, and when any financial concession would prove of value to the mass of students. Consequently, instead of keeping a regiment of servants, the pupils themselves were required to do a considerable part of the housekeeping work.

Students act as housemaids and waitresses, and none escapes her share of domestic service.

But the tax on each girl's time is small—the limit is fifty minutes a day, but most of them get through in much less.

In a way, this is working a career through college, as the result means that the expenses of each student are thus reduced by from $100 to $150 a year. The wealthy girl is treated exactly like her poorer schoolmate. Students at Barnard College—the sister of Columbia—are continually attempting to solve the problem of getting through the higher school on a slender purse. In some instances they are successful, in others, they at least earn pin money.

A student exchange here looks out for the interests of such girls. Sometimes paying positions are obtained outside, but most of those who earn money are able to do so within the college.

Tutoring backward students is a principal source of revenue. This pays a dollar an hour to the student-teacher and helps to swell the assets of many an upper class woman.

Barnard has a large sweet tooth, and filling it brings revenue to industrious cake and candy makers.

Sweetmeats usually find ready sale. Many girls do plain or fancy sewing for their classmates. Others sell stationery, pencils, fountain pens and other articles.

Some girls are fortunate enough to have clerical positions down town in New York, which they fill after school hours. A few do light sewing for families, and others spend their afternoons or evenings reading to invalids or acting as companions.

One girl supported herself entirely during her senior year by such outside work. She held a scholarship, so that there was no tuition to pay. She obtained some light clerical work, taught a small dancing class of girls in the evening and during leisure moments made candy for sale in the college exchange.

Girls of Smith College, Northampton, Mass., are especially resourceful in padding out slender assets by tactful business enterprise. Some time ago one of the graduates of this institution submitted to a friend her account book for a year. Upon the income side were items aggregating $140, representing a little over 300 hours of labor.

What this enterprising woman did to secure money for the expense of her education was stated in the various items.

Tutoring students led; from this work she realized about $75. Sewing, principally upon gymnasium suits for freshmen, brought in about $15, and other sewing of plain or fancy character some $15 more.

She acted as agent for a hat store and reaped something over $10 in commissions, she mended clothing and darned stockings, distributed college magazines, sold Christmas books and cards, tooth paste and other toilet articles, and in this way added to her income.

None of her schoolmates thought any the less of her because of these efforts, in fact, she was one of the most popular girls in college.

One girl at Smith devised a college calendar that immensely pleased the other students. She sold enough of them to take her half through the term.

Another, from pecan nuts and tissue paper, devised a set of football players for weeks she could not make duplicates of these figures fast enough to fill her orders.

A number of students make dancing classes pay. There are always numbers of freshmen recruits who know little or nothing of the graces of the ballroom floor, and they are glad to pay for instruction. The fee for each member of the class is usually small, but the numbers joining make the venture profitable.

One student of practical turn of mind at Smith offered, at the beginning of a term, to keep the stockings of her classmates in good condition for $5 a year. She secured thirty patrons, and the $50 thus secured went a long way toward providing for her living expenses.

Other girls, at the beginning of a term, make gymnasium suits for the newcomers. Students have been known to realize $300 from this industry each year, but it is grinding work.

Bulletin boards in the Smith college dormitories often bear curious signs, but all indicating that the American spirit of self help is as strong in the young women of the land as in the men.

One placard announced, for instance, "Shoe buttons placed with patent fasteners, 15 cents a pair." Another, "I will make your bed and dust your room, terms moderate." Still another solicited opportunities for "washing dishes after spreads"—for a consideration.

Artistic girls take full advantage of holiday and special seasons. For Thanksgiving, Christmas, St. Valentine's day, Easter and the various school gala days they offer unique and often meritorious cards, which are sold at moderate prices, but which result in considerable sums.

When springtime comes the makers of shirtwaists get busy. There is always a lively demand for these garments, and the college maker is usually able to produce fin de siècle styles that please the buyers better than the more finished products of city modistes.

Oberlin college, at the town of that name in Ohio, was one of the first to offer higher educational advantages to women on the same terms as men. Here self-support has been imperative with a large number of the girls who have dauntlessly struggled toward their higher ideals.

In that town many college girls find employment in the homes of the citizens. At times they rent rooms in private houses, giving in exchange a certain amount of labor in the household.

A similar solution of the problem of college maintenance has been found by girl students at the University of California. Many of the feminine pupils in that school find places in the private families of Berkeley, earning their board and lodging with three or four hours' work a day.

Here, too, a sewing school has proven of great advantage. The sewing classes are directed by a seamstress of acknowledged ability and girls completing the course receive diplomas.

Each student is paid by the hour for what she does and some of the work is so meritorious that it finds a ready market in the large cities of the west and east.

At Bryn Mawr, near Philadelphia, the aim is to relieve students of every suggestion of work, in order that they may devote themselves the more assiduously to their studies. As a rule, the Bryn Mawr girl comes of a family of means and she is not obliged to seek aid in maintaining herself during her college career.

Still, if necessary, she may find aid. She is supposed to use her head rather than her hands in working her way through. There are occupations, however, to which she may turn within the institution.

Tutoring is made a source of profit, assistants in the chemical and biological laboratories and in other departments are paid, as are the assistant librarians, the girls who distribute letters and others who turn industry to account.

In almost every institution girls who need money to help them through college careers and who do not shrink from any honorable means of increasing their incomes, find many ways of self-aid.

Some are paid by the college authorities for taking care of libraries and reading rooms during certain hours. Laboratory assistants are in demand. They wash bottles, put new material in order and do other similar work, usually at 25 cents an hour.

Quite a number find typewriting to do both for members of the faculty and for outside customers. Some copy themes for literary students and music for those in the literary classes.

Some years ago the field of opportunity for the girls of Radcliffe college was widened by an appeal to the employing centers of Cambridge and Boston.

Circulars were sent out stating that the poorer students of the institution would be glad of employment in mending, taking care of children, reading aloud, acting as shopping agents, doing typewriting, copying and other work for a few hours each day.

In response to this appeal, work was found for a large number of students who were in this way enabled to gratify their ambition in the line of receiving a higher education.

MORE SOUTHERN SPINDLES.

While 130,000 spindles were added or contracted for in southern mills in the first quarter of the present calendar year, the second quarter did better, for it brought out announcements that cover 327,000 spindles. At this rate of increase the year promises to show an increase in southern spindles approaching a million.

North Carolina's enterprise is easily first this year, her additions in April, May and June aggregating 157,293 spindles and 2270 looms. South Carolina comes next with 101,304 spindles and 177 looms, and Georgia follows with 44,000 spindles and 176 looms. Mississippi added during the second quarter 9000 spindles and Virginia installed 6000 spindles—Birmingham, Ala., Ag-Herald.

In England no arrests may be made on Sunday, except for treason, felony or a breach of the peace, and freedom from arrest at any time on civil process is a privilege enjoyed by members of the royal family and their servants, bishops, peers and peeresses and members of parliament during the sitting of parliament and forty days before and after each session.

SUMMER SUITS WORN BY SOCIETY LEADERS

Mrs. Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt has been wearing an Eton suit. It is built of lightweight autumn cloth, and its color is prairie green. Prairie green is a pretty, soft, becoming tint that goes well with bronze.

Although a leader of fashion and a woman of untold wealth, Mrs. Vanderbilt elects to follow the popular styles, says a contributor to the Pittsburgh Sunday Press, and her prairie green cloth suit was made up very much like the suit of an ordinary individual.

Her skirt was plaited with the plaits inverted and laid in, almost invisibly, along the waist line. There was quite a wide flare, suggesting the exaggerated flare of two seasons ago, and down the front panel there was a pattern in bronze embroidery.

The jacket was an Eton, made of prairie green taffeta. It was rounding in the front and slightly slashed in the middle of the back, and its only trimming was a little frill of lace which was put on all around the edge of the coat. The effect was exceedingly smart and very becoming.

While speaking of Mrs. Vanderbilt, it may be mentioned that she dresses mostly in green, for green is exceptionally becoming to her pale, silver-blond style of beauty.

One of her suits is gooseberry green chiffon cloth very heavily embroidered. It is made on the shirtwaist suit pattern, with a skirt fitted to the hips. There is a wide panel laid in tucks down the middle of the front. The foot of the skirt is trimmed with three rows of gooseberry green ribbon, put on almost flat and stitched around the top. The blouse waist has a pointed white gulfumpe with the slightest touch of hand embroidery.

Could anything be easier for the amateur to make than this season's styles? Autumn is coming on and from present indications it appears that the fashions will change very little. This is a good thing for the home dressmaker who feels that she must make over her last year's autumn costumes.

NEW REDS AND BLUES.

It is not going to be an impossible thing for the woman of moderate purse to own as many as six fall gowns, for materials are to be reasonable in price. And, what is better still, she can afford to have them made up in very smart style and finished in the daintiest of ways. The French dressmakers who set the pace in the fashion world have this to say about the styles that are to come:

Autumn dresses will be built of very thin cloth and their colors will be the new greens, the new blues, the new reds and the new tans.

They say that green, which has had such a phenomenal success, will be seen this fall in leaf green, gooseberry green and prairie green. It will also be noticed in emerald, grass, geranium and deep leaf green.

Among the blues there are half a dozen new tones, but prune blue, forget-me-not blue and Russian blue will continue to hold their own in spite of the rivalry of the newcomers. Of course, turquoise blue will be extremely popular with women who can afford to wear it. But it is the most perishable of all the shades of blue, one can't get so little wear out of it.

In the dark reds the French dressmakers assert there will be a still wider latitude. There is copper red, which is almost a brown, and which is extremely good in Panama cloth, canvas cloth, broadcloth, lady's cloth, serge and velle. Terra cotta will be worn a great deal, and its natural combination—from a color standpoint—is turquoise blue. And terra cotta and turquoise go well together, particularly when there is a touch of black in the costume. Dark cherry red will also be worn and these shades of red, both light and dark, will influence the colors of fall.

While speaking of the new fall colors one must not forget the leather shades, which are always much liked. There is tan which is the most popular shade of leather ever invented, and there is a pale suede leather. Beside this comes red morocco, which promises to be the thing in lady's clothes. Castor gray can be mentioned as another leather tone, and then there are a dozen and one different shades which can be recommended to the woman who is only going to buy one or two fall dresses.

THE WOMAN WHO CAN EMBROIDER.

It is going to be a wonderful autumn for the woman who can embroider, and it is predicted that the heavy linen dresses will be worn until snow flies. There is a new heavy linen, just out, which is so heavy that it looks like cloth. While thick in texture and coarse in weave, it is not a heavy material, and it can be worn by the woman who does not like to have a dress that drags upon her hips. The light weight stuffs will be popular all winter.

In the trousseau of a bride who will be seen a great deal at the autumn resorts, there is a deep green linen made with skirt and Eton. The whole suit is so heavily embroidered that scarcely a particle of the material can be seen. This is, of course, a slight exaggeration, but the truth of the matter is that there is a very wide panel of embroidered linen at the front. This embroidery is composed of raised work and of English eyelet work, and it is done in precisely the same shade of green as the gown. Then the side panels are embroidered. One can imagine that the effect is very charming, and also one can predict that it will be worn both summer and winter.

The belt to wear just now is made of either taffeta, or linen. It should be in white and its shape should be rather wide, coming up well toward the bust line; it is also slightly curved so as to fill the hips. If well planned it will give something the effect of a princess when clasped around the waist; but, of course, it should be exquisitely fitted, or it will be a sad failure.

APPLIQUES OF LACE.

This very plain, wide white girdle is very trying to the figure, and to make it less so there are various expedients which one can employ, such as the application of white lace butterflies. These are put on the girdle in such a way that they almost encircle it as though the butterflies were touching wings and flying around the belt line. The new leather belts are fitted below the hips instead of above.

A lovely girdle was made of heavy white linen. It was cut very wide and fitted to the belt line. When it had been perfectly fitted, it was trimmed with a double row of gold filagree buttons extending down the back and down the front. Then, with great care, the owner had taken a dozen white lace butterflies and had dyed them a golden yellow. They were applied to the girdle, so that the wings of the butterflies were outspread, but scarcely touching. A gold bead was sewed on each wing and there were two tiny gold beads for eyes. This girdle, it may be seen, was quite dressy enough for any occasion.

Another very handsome girdle was made of white taffeta. It was fitted to the figure below the belt line so as to give a long hip effect. It was clasped in the front with a wide gold buckle, while in the back there was a big gold slide. Gold lace butterflies and gold lace birds were applied to the silk in reckless profusion.

The moral of this girdle tale is that you must have something handsome to go around your belt line, and the handsomer the better, for the girdle can be made to supply the finishing touch to the gown.

MRS. GROVER CLEVELAND'S FOULARD.

Many are the handsome gowns being worn by well-dressed women. Mrs.

Grover Cleveland came out the other day in a raisin colored foulard. It was trimmed with bands of raisin red velvet. The waist was a three-piece waist, consisting of jacket, shirtwaist and gulfumpe. The shirtwaist was white, trimmed with exceedingly fine raisin colored embroidery, silver braid.

Of course the Baby Princess, like every other gown of the season, will be elaborately trimmed with lace and embroidery. It can be embroidered all the way up the front with a most elaborate panel, while embroidery decorates the pointed yoke and panels upon the waist. The sleeves should be elbow length and the tops should be thickly embroidered, or one can wear heavy lace epaulettes if one prefers, while the jacket was a raisin velvet of chiffon weight, buttoning in the back. It was one of those new fangled Etons which button in the back and which can be warranted to make the figure look exceedingly youthful.

Another very distinctive gown was that worn by Mrs. Roosevelt on one of her trips up from Oyster Bay. The dress was a gooseberry green serge. It was one of those smooth, light weight serges, which remind one so much of the ladies cloth because they are so smooth and fine. It was made up in an exceedingly popular fashion. Its cut is what is known as the Baby Princess, and it was elaborately trimmed with embroidery.

And here it is best to speak about the Baby Princess gown, which is one of the new things for fall. At first appearance the Baby Princess reminds one of the shirtwaist suit, but on investigation it proves to be quite different.

It consists of a shaped skirt and a shirtwaist, but the two are sewed together at the belt line, while the point of joining is covered by a very narrow belt of lace or velvet. This belt should not be more than an inch in width, so that the general effect of the princess is preserved. The dress is put on all at once.

Of course the Baby Princess buttons all the way down the back. Or, more properly speaking, it hooks invisibly all the way down from the nape of the neck to the placket hole. It is a most convenient frock, for it is put on in one piece and it requires neither belt nor girdle. It is likewise easy to make, for one has only to join a short waist and a skirt together and cover the band with a tiny bit of lace or a handsome strap of ribbon, or a band of velvet.

Young Mrs. Henry Clews, who is considered one of the most beautiful women in the world, is wearing this season a series of rose colored dresses. Rose, by the way, well fits her brunette beauty, and her latest rose gown is quite a triumph in tone. It is a princess, with eight rows of narrow lace set in around the belt line.

There is a deep shaped founce, headed by eight more rows of lace, and there is a very deep and very square lace yoke. The sleeves are entirely of lace; and with this she wears a hat which is a triumph of pink roses, pink plumes, pink straw and pink chiffon velvet.

While it is getting almost too late in the season to talk about summer parasols, still there are indications that the parasol will be carried until late. Even when it is laid aside, it will be succeeded by the silk umbrella, which is so very much like the sunshade that it can scarcely be distinguished from it.

One of the handsomest parasols of the season was carried not long ago by Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, who unfurled it while seated in her automobile in front of the casino. Its foundation was the popular prairie green taffeta. Its trimming consisted of bands of Valenciennes lace, which were applied to the parasol over bands of deep green taffeta. Then there was a quantity of Scotch embroidery, each panel having its own elaborate design. A bow of silk finishes the handle and the ferrule.

Scotch embroidery will be seen a great deal this fall. And, lest there be anyone who should not understand just what is meant by the term, it may be explained that Scotch embroidery is the same that is applied to all the new thistle designs. There is one very elaborate thistle design, consisting of three green thistles and three red ones, joined by a swirl of embroidery and lace. There is this exceedingly effective there is no doubt.

A very lovely chrysanthemum colored red cloth was embroidered all around the Eton and up to the tunic skirt with thistle designs. They were in green, pink and red, and a few were of fluffy white. Of course, they were a great deal of work and correspondingly pretty.

ANIMAL HEADS WILL BE CARRIED.

Something new in the umbrella line was carried the other day, when a fashionable woman made her appearance with a silk umbrella fully twenty-six inches in size. It was edged all around with pink silk frills, while the handle was white enamel with a big pink topaz in the end.

Very elaborate umbrella handles are to be carried this fall, and, at first sight, one can almost imagine oneself in a menagerie, for the handles show heads of owls, monkeys, tigers and lions. Of course, the pretty ivory elephant plays a very important part, but it is expensive, and there are few who can afford to buy a real ivory carving to put into the handle of a silk umbrella.

In the autumn vogues one can begin to notice the grape and chrysanthemum designs. These are in all shades of red, all shades of green, and all shades of purple, and many of them combine all tones of bronze and green.

A chrysanthemum red dress was worn the other day by Mrs. Waldorf Astor. It had an embroidery of the chrysanthemums extending all around the foot of the skirt. There were two rows of the flowers with the rows about a foot apart. There were chrysanthemum flowers and leaves, and on each side was a threadlike design of silk embroidery.

THE HAT FOR THE SEASON

The August picture hat now worn in Paris and illustrated on the front page of the TRIBUNE's magazine section today is tempting enough, writes a Paris correspondent, to arouse the most inert ambition—if a woman is ever inert about a becoming hat!

Sweet simplicity is masquerading under the name of a "Conder hat." It might interest Mr. Conder (the young English artist whose Watteauesque ladies are at present enjoying a great vogue in Paris) to know that his namesake is nothing more than a baby's leghorn flat which passed through the workshop (or rather studio) of a great French milliner, who took great care that it should lose none of its simplicity in its otherwise complete transformation.

First it is wired under the brim in approved zig zag fashion, so that the edges remain thin. Then there is a round bandeau of lightweight crepe net, which is larger than the saucy little crown that is tilted on it. Herein lies the secret of success: No matter how small your hat crown, make the bandeau in your own head size, not higher than one inch in front, nor lower than three in back and at the left side. Four or five big roses are tacked on in such a way that they will sway with each toss of the head. As it is such a simple trimming, particular care must be taken in the selection of color.

Old-fashioned pink flowers, shading into purple, are lovely with a drooping bow under the brim made of velvet ribbon of a rich purple shade. If you succeed in getting this tied with just the right touch of carelessness, and in a tone that blends properly with your pink roses, while it contrasts with your brown tulle bandeau, you will have achieved an artistic triumph of your own.

It hardly seems possible that the same leghorn hat, wired and banded exactly the same, should form a foundation for an elaborate plume hat. This model should not be attempted unless you have a fortune stored away in plumes—or one waiting for investment.

If you have white plumes, get them dipped blue or pink, each a different shade, but not shaded—this is the new thing. In the hat pictured pompadour roses were exquisitely combined, a pink rose with half a dozen different blue plumes. Indeed, it seems that, you can't use too many feathers nor too many shades.

In direct contrast to this picturesque elegance is a little white sunbonnet, for the demure maid who spends her summer wandering around gardens and basking in the sand. For this type, whether she be a baby of seven or an old lady of seventy, there is nothing more becoming than that pure nun-like line.

All-over cambric embroidery in a small design is pretty for making such a bonnet. It should be lined flatly with a medium-weight lawn, which, when stitched to the embroidery, forms casings for numerous cords that give the necessary stiffness. Fewer rows of stitching are required if you use featherbone in the same way; but, of course, there is always a time to slip these in and out of the casing for washing. This bonnet is also pretty in light colors, but white is always lovelier, especially since the light-colored ribbon choux and strings, which are depended on for the effective touch, are so much more charming on white.

And even the tailor-made athletic girl may leave off her stiff conventional hat and still be tailor-made, for "Panama" with their innumerable possibilities for becomingness, have replaced the regulation ribbon-banded sailor. As they are now made in a coarse weave, which is just as good looking and much less expensive than the finer grades, there is no reason why every one should not be "a la mode."

To be strictly so you must take a yard and a half of rather vivid pink or blue taffeta ribbon, about four inches in width; tie it, scarf-like, around your Panama with a long bow at the left side, turn your brim rakishly in the way that is most becoming to you and you will find yourself lovelier for tennis, boating, driving or tramping than you ever imagined possible—and even for automobilizing!

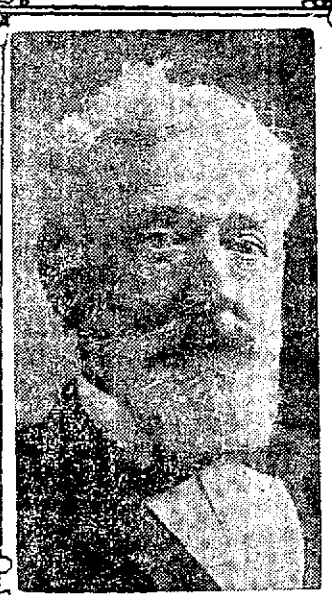

As most of us expected, some of the loveliest of the summer's picture hats have been regular Gainsboroughs—great hats with brims bent into a picturesque abandon, with plume piled apparently upon plume for the trimming. Indeed, so cleverly is an occasional hat copied from some famous old picture style, and worn at the same wonderful tilt, that the first sight is as if you suddenly beheld the original of the picture descend from her frame.

TENT CITY OF THE ELKS AND THEIR HEADQUARTERS

(BY PAUL GOLDSMITH.)

Few people, even within Oakland lodge of Elks itself, know how much hard work was done by that organization during the recent disaster in San Francisco, and it is but just and fair that something be said of the earnest effort and long hours that were given over to the aid of the suffering by the officers and members of No. 171. The members themselves are not saying much about it, for one of the mottos of the order is "charity," and when they care for the afflicted they consider it but one of their duties. But it was not the mere extension of aid to the suffering that deserves mention, but the practical, common sense and rapid way in which it was extended that makes the work so remarkable. Many people gave long hours and many people gave thousands of dollars of money, but nowhere was the work any more rapid or efficient.

The news had hardly reached Oakland on the first day of the fire when I. H. Clay, exalted ruler of Oakland lodge, gathered around him a few of the officers and leaders of the lodge. They saw ahead of them the greatest opportunity for the exemplification of one of the precepts of the order. Mr. Clay and his advisers decided at once to go to work, and before the flood of refugees had begun to flow Oaklandward the Elks had their plans well under way and they were the very first to be able to welcome and care for the afflicted.

This was the more commendable because Oakland lodge itself had suffered from the shock. The building of the lodge was badly damaged and there was not money enough in its treasury to meet the bill for these repairs, much less care for refugees from San Francisco. But the members never stopped to consider their own lodge or the state of its finances—there was much to be done and nothing else was to be considered.

Mr. Clay at first appointed a small set of committees, but before the work had grown a week old volunteers had drifted in, until nearly every member of the lodge was doing what he could. The original list of committees was as follows:

Executive committee—I. H. Clay, F. W. Leavitt and W. H. Halsey, with D. McLaren as secretary.

Grounds and transportation—F. W. Leavitt.

Food—E. M. Freeman, E. Hunt and W. J. Allen.

Tents—Clay Hawbaker and F. W. Dorsaz.

Reception and investigation—J. M. Shanley, W. H. Halsey, D. A. Sinclair, J. F. W. Sohst and Ben A. Norris.

Finance—George W. Reed, George W. Frick, Julius Seuberg and M. A. Whidden.

Rooms and houses—D. A. Sinclair, J. F. W. Sohst and A. B. Tarpey.

Stoves and coals—Percy DuBoise.

Straw—O. Whitney.

These committees got to work with a will. The finance committee was in session every day, and upon its members fell some of the hardest labor. They were the ones who had to meet the bills that the others were contracting, and now that the work is over and the accounts are settled it can be said that not a bill is unpaid, and that money was forthcoming for all and every demand that was made upon the relief fund.

The next thing was to settle whether only Elks or the general public should be cared for. As the magnitude of the disaster increased, the committees unanimously decided that all sufferers should be cared for, whether Elks or not, and this policy was maintained until the military took over the now famous Elks camp. Literally thousands who were not members of the order were fed, clothed and given transportation at the expense of Oakland lodge when that lodge did not have money enough to make the repairs upon its own building.

It was decided at once to erect a tent city on Adams Point. The use of the ground was secured and half the members of the lodge assisted at the tent city at some time or other. The success of the camp can only be judged by the fact that when the military took over the place an officer was sent to inspect it and he pronounced it the best amateur camp that he had ever seen and as good as many a camp that had been laid out by regularly instructed military officers. This camp was laid out with regular streets, and the sanitation was so perfect that the very first day it was opened there was running water in every part, something that the camps in San Francisco did not have for weeks.

Senator Frank Leavitt had general charge of the camp and day and night he worked with Billy Smith, Clay Hawbaker, Percy DuBoise and Fred Dorsaz always on the ground with him. No help whatever was asked from the outside and the house force of the Elks club was transplanted bodily to the tent city to assume charge of the culinary department. William Morey, who has been steward for the Elks club for years, had general supervision of the kitchen department of the camp, and much of the success of the latter was due to him.

Other members threw themselves into the work in different ways, and many an Elk who had never been tried out before showed the kind of stuff of which he was made.

Mr. McLaren, as secretary of the executive committee, had a most difficult task to perform. Every day from early one morning until well into the day of the following morning he was at his desk watching accounts, running up figures, attending to the correspondence and seeing that the work was kept systematized. Myron Whidden performed a similar duty for the finance committee, and he was at his desk continuously. Ben Norris was constantly on duty receiving people who drifted into the Elks' rooms for information, and he had with him a corps of those who went between the Elks' rooms and the City Hall, securing passes, transportation and the like for those who needed such small favors.

This inside work was wonderfully systematized. In the first place all Elks and their friends were called upon to state how many refugees, age and sex, whether Elks or outsiders, they could take and would accommodate at their homes. This information was all placed in a card index, and when an application for help was received no time was lost in finding the exact kind of a place where the applicant could be cared for. Another card index was kept of every person who came into the rooms, his or her name and the address of the place to which they were sent. Hundreds of families and friends were reunited by this very simple and effective system, and many a time did the police and outside committees have to apply to the Elks for information about those who were missing.

After the work of caring for those who had come to Oakland was well in hand the search for the missing and those who needed help was begun. Here again a number of members showed their latent ability. Wagons were secured and day after day volunteers searched amid the camps and ruins of San Francisco, looking up those who needed help but who did not know where to go to find it. In this work George Neece, Clinton Dodge, W. J. Allen, Percy Fuller, Dr. Henderson, Mr. Gilbert, Henry A. Melvin, G. R. Lukens, and a Mr. Botsford of Topeka, Kansas, were on duty day and night. Charles Butler turned most of his horse and wagon outfits over to the lodge and aided in this work.

Then came the question of food and supplies. This was where Captain E. M. Freeman took hold with a will. Not a day passed that he was not on duty for at least fifteen hours a day. He had to gather supplies when every other relief committee was reaching and grasping for the same thing, and to him is due the credit for the fact that never once did the tent city run out of food and everything was of the best.

Soon help came from the outside.

The first lodge to respond was Spokane, with $500, which was followed by more. Seattle lodge sent the entire contents of its treasury, $500, which was made payable to the relief committee of Oakland lodge. The Kansas Elks dispatched to Oakland an entire train of twenty-seven cars loaded with supplies. Then Robert W. Brown, Grand Exalted Ruler of the order, issued this appeal, and came to Oakland:

OFFICIAL CIRCULAR NO. 6.
Louisville, Ky., April 19, 1906.

To the Officers and Members of all Subordinate and Protective Order of Elks of the United States—Greeting.

Dear Brothers: Immediately following receipt of first news from stricken California, our pledge was given to do the Elks' full part in assisting to relieve distress there, and plans are now perfected to carry this promise into prompt and practical execution, and especially as it seeks to succor the homeless and destitute of our own members. Already the forwarding of money has begun. Without further notice you are asked to send your checks, or remittances by wire, to Fred C. Robinson, grand secretary, B. P. O. Elks, Dubuque, Iowa, and specify "Emergency Charity Fund." By this method, and following the system that has been perfected, an orderly business arrangement will be preserved and there is guarantee of better results with no extra delay. Your grand exalted ruler leaves at once for the scenes of disaster, where his highest duty now calls him, to direct the distribution of your beneficence. Meanwhile, to relieve pressing necessities a state commission has been organized in California to represent our order in its grand lodge capacity and auxiliaries throughout the state are being appointed to do the work for which we are banded together. Among Elks there is no occasion to make appeal, but I ask my brothers to keep in mind that he gives twice who gives quickly.

Yours for the good we can do,
ROBERT W. BROWN,
Grand Exalted Ruler.

Attest:
FRED ROBINSON,
Grand Exalted Secretary.

Mr. Brown was received in Oakland by Exalted Ruler I. H. Clay in behalf of the lodge. Quarters were prepared for him in the Elks' Club, and he at once proceeded to organize a general relief committee with H. A. Melvin and I. H. Clay at the head. Then the work became more general. But the Oakland boys never stopped hustling until the military took over the camp.

Hundreds of stories could be told of families reunited, or suffering relieved, of the patrols which went out to search for women and children who might be suffering, and of the hundreds of letters of thanks and blessings that have been received by Oakland lodge. But it is not necessary to do this. The boys gave their time and labor for what they decided was right, and the very practical character of the labor is worthy of mention. It is hardly fair to say that only those mentioned here are entitled to credit. But if a list of those who took part in this labor of mercy was made out, it would have to include nearly every one of the thousand members of Oakland lodge No. 171. I. H. Clay, who was at the head of the work by virtue of his office, as exalted ruler, possessed the very valuable faculty of getting assistance from others and he knew just where to place each volunteer, a fact which contributed very largely to the success of the work.

And, now, just a few figures to show what was done. At the Tent City from 750 to 1000 persons were fed daily for several weeks. Fully 500 Elks were cared for at different times in private homes; over 1000 were registered at the Elks' headquarters; several hundred were searched for and taken from camps in San Francisco; hundreds of tons of supplies were distributed, goods to the amount of several thousands of dollars were purchased at the Oakland stores for the suffering, and all by Oakland lodge, No. 171.

The Lonely Mistresses of Millions

Mrs. Russell Sage, who has become the custodian of one of the biggest fortunes in the world by the recent death of her husband, has just one intimate friend in all the world. That one bosom companion, says the Boston Post, is Miss Helen Gould.

Miss Helen Gould, who counts herself mistress of many millions of dollars, has just one person on earth to whom she really opens her heart; and that is the widow of Russell Sage.

The one is in Mrs. Sage's decline; the other is still in youth.

Both are rich beyond the dreams of avarice; yet both are sad and lonely women.

The father of Miss Gould once saved the husband of Mrs. Sage from utter financial ruin. And, in kind, Russell Sage once preserved Jay Gould from financial annihilation. Thus it is evident the friendship of the two families is of no recent origin.

Helen Gould has long been noted for the charities that now employ most of her time. She has built the most magnificent sailors' home in New York, while she has also erected a home for crippled children which is used as a model all over the country.

Notwithstanding the disparity of their ages, Mrs. Sage and Miss Gould have been intimate as only unhappy women can be. And their lives have run in strangely similar channels.

Mrs. Sage had but one bosom companion in the old days; her husband, now deceased, Miss Gould looked only to her father to assuage her troubles, but he long since passed away.

Both live in fine mansions, with retinues of servants who wait upon their personal welfare and care for them almost as though they were of kin.

Neither has cared much for the ailments of fashionable society.

Long, long ago Mrs. Sage gave vent to the desires of her heart for her sex: "There is an immense amount of feminine talent and energy wasted in the world every day. This is not due to the indifference or the laziness of woman, for she is eager to do, to accomplish, to go out into the field of life and achieve for herself and for her kind. But she simply does not know how. One of the most important movements of the day, therefore, is the reawakening of woman, the building her up on a new basis of self-help and work for others. That movement will set loose an amount of energy and talent that will revolutionize our social life."

In organizing the Woman's War Relief Association, Miss Gould was the power behind the throne at the time of the Spanish-American war, and without her aid, it might never have come into existence. Her generosity and, above all, her business ability made this volunteer organization much more efficient in the care of sick soldiers than did the regular army organization, harassed as it was by red tape.

Once launched on her career of philanthropy, Miss Gould found the work well suited to her. So she carved out a line of effort for herself, to which she has always adhered, and which has made her name blessed among the poor and down-trodden throughout the land.

Since she has assumed the duties of ministering angel of comfort, she has been pursued by cranks of all kinds who would prey upon her charitable disposition, to the embarrassment and even injury of those who are really in need.

For this reason, Miss Gould always has made it a point to obtain complete information concerning any cause which she intends to take to heart, and practically every cent she has spent has thus brought a corresponding amount of happiness to some stricken soul.

Three of Miss Gould's pet charities are the naval branch of the Brooklyn Y. M. C. A., the New York Home for the Friendless, and the Woody Crest Children's Home for Crippled Children.

As yet, however, Mrs. Sage has not shown so much active interest in systematic charity as has Miss Gould. But her bounty always has been great, from her own personal purse, and she proposes to devote most of her newly inherited wealth to worthy causes.

During the course of her life, she has been trying to make over that money-making machine who was her husband. The greatest satisfaction of her life occurred at the time of the great San Francisco disaster, when she induced Russell Sage to give away $5000 to the relief fund. This was the greatest amount of money that he ever donated to any cause at one time.

Now the eyes of the philanthropic world are turned towards her, awaiting her disposition in regard to the great wealth of which she is now the sole possessor.

They begin to see the dawn of a new dispensation in regard to Russell Sage's millions, and foretell the time when the golden piles that he hoarded will be scattered broadcast in the cause of sweet charity.

But it is believed she will try to do more for the rising generation of young women than did Miss Gould. Mrs. Sage is far along in years, and is thoroughly versed in the ways of the world.

She has more than once over her own signature condemned these conditions, and now that the opportunity is here, she will most likely exert her influence to bring about a purer moral standard in the New York household by erecting institutions where the girls who now roam the streets of that great city will find a haven better fitted to make them independent and high-minded women. In regard to the women of the middle class, Mrs. Sage once said:

"In our great cities many women are necessarily lonely or are forced into vicious society. And this loneliness is not ameliorated by attending balls and other entertainments. It is unfortunate that men of small means, having to attend business, must leave their wives much alone in hotels and boarding houses. It is not woman's nature to be philosophically resigned to solitude. She must have society; preferably good, but she must have society."

Betty Martin Interview Cunningham, Fogarty and Thompson

Mr. Arthur Cunningham used to be a church choir singer; from that work he drifted to stage life.

"My very first experience on the stage," said he, his generous-sized mouth expanding in a genial smile, as though in enjoyment of some hidden joke, "was in Sunday-school theatricals."

Then I comprehended his covert mirth and the latent sarcasm of his remarks. The Sunday School and the stage! the very antithesis each of the other; the schoolroom conjures in the mind's eye hard wooden benches, floors with strips of carpet running down the narrow aisles, and windows through whose colored panes mysterious lights and Fogarty, serious-minded, and looking the part, as becomes the man who does "Dick Deadeye" to perfection, sat stiffly upright. Cunningham, a shade ruddier than usual, fingered his hat brim abstractedly for a moment, while his wide-set eyes roved from one protector to the other.

I sat opposite, eyeing them curiously. "Who's going to start the ball?" The question broke an awkward pause. One man at a time had been my previous experience in the interviewing line, and I had not yet regained my equanimity at the sight of three. "Huh?" This from Fogarty. "She wants to know who's gothe program, and all around it I had all the criticisms that came out; on the opposite page was my photograph in character costume. And it all went up in smoke—never can be replaced, either. Think of it—every performance I ever took part in, and my pictures, too! You know I used to take one of my photographs when I got 'em and soak it loose from the mount, run my pen-knife under it—his hands described the process better than words—and hear. Calm any fear by listening to Joe Fogarty say that he didn't believe that the Italian aforesaid would have courage to even strike a match at anybody, let alone use a stiletto.

"It must have been very interesting!" I referred to the album.

"Yes, indeed. But it's all gone—went up in smoke." Cunningham's head sunk momentarily on his capacious chest and his hands vibrated through the air. "There was another thing, too, that can playing 'The Highwayman,' and my song was called 'Farewell to the King's Highway.' And I sang," he continued, "the first two lines on the new stage, in a duet with Annie Meyers."

"And I," ventured Fogarty, "spoke the first two lines on the new stage."

"You haven't any of these wonderful experiences behind you, Mr. Thompson?"

The bass singer laughed lightly, and the two little fingers by Thompson made a deep inhalation and resumed his indolent attitude. I felt a responsive thrill as I looked him over, for he's a pretty fine sample, as Native Sons go. Off the stage he looks not unlike the "Felix Graham" in which he made his debut a few weeks since. To speak the exact truth, his hair and Van Dyke beard are tinged with gray. These marks of Father Time do not give one an impression of age—rather they seemed to savor of early piety—yet of this the newly-created operatic singer did not speak.

"He's sung a whole lot in public; haven't you?" demanded the one worn by General Allen. Again Cunningham had his inning, and it was a good one. When the six-footer and over announced that he was a "Californian, and glad of it," Joe Fogarty supplemented the remark by saying:

"I'm a Californian, too. Was born in San Francisco, and lived there all my life!" Then it was that Cunningham took up the challenge. He's a Canadian by accident of birth, and a sort of distant relation to Ould Ireland, or I miss my guess, but by design he's an American citizen.

"That's why I can sing 'My Own United States,'" he exulted, shadows alternate. Above all the voice of the teacher, telling the immaculate little boys and girls the things whereof they should keep their spotless knickerbockers and stiffly-starched skirts free. Chief of all the evils to be avoided is the stage. The category varies sometimes, but in the mind of the Sunday-School teacher there is no exception to the rule barring the actor man from the elect.

The stage itself, with its mummery, its gauds and glittering tinsels—is there one in this wide world, who, having gazed thereon, can honestly say, "I like it not?"

Cunningham, if report be true, still clings to early training. He is said to be a Christian Scientist; but a man's religion and his politics are ticklish subjects, and on the forbidden ground I did not venture.

Possibly the presence of the chaperons held me back, as they sat listening to the newly-made American citizen; at any rate, these topics were avoided. The chaperons evidently came along as ballast, though Arthur Cunningham certainly looks capable of holding his own. Be that as it may, he came into the sanctum with Joe Fogarty, the veteran, as advance guard, and Frank Thompson, the newest; yet, bringing up the rear. Cunningham made a very sizable sandwich.

They shook hands ponderously all around, then seated themselves in characteristic attitude.

Frank Thompson, as behooves one who has been called a "bon vivant" and a "man of the world," had a reputation to sustain. He lolled carelessly against the table, crossed his grey-trousered legs, and threw his left hand nonchalantly across the back of the chair, having first flicked the ashes from his cigar.

ing to begin," Cunningham leaned forward to explain.

"Oh, is that it?" "Yes. I guess you'd better start, Joe; you were first over there."

"Yes; I guess I was."

"Over where?"

"The old Tivoli!" Cunningham said. This in an amazed tone, as though no words were needed. Just why they supposed I wanted to know about the "Old Tivoli" was one of the things "norfeller could find out." To be sure, there was an indefinable something about the old playhouse which invariably got into the blood if one drank beer and inhaled the atmosphere of smoke and music often enough, but all that belongs now somewhere in the realms of dreams.

But Fogarty was in a reminiscent mood. His eyes deepened with the effort of retrospection.

"Do you know, I went with my mother to the very first performance ever given in the old Tivoli! and I had the program of every performance ever given there, from the opening down to the very last—and I lost them all in the fire." The corkscrew twist at the left-hand corner of his mouth deepened perceptibly as he spoke. Ah, Mr. Joseph Fogarty, you are not the only one who lost treasured bits in that already historical fire. Hearts and homes were lost on the 18th of April, 1906!

Arthur Cunningham heaved a sympathetic sigh.

"I lost everything I had in the world; everything! But there's one thing I don't think's ever been mentioned, and you can tell about it if you like—my album—that was lost! In it I had pasted the program of every opera I ever sang in. On one leaf I pasted then paste it in my book. The rest of my pictures I'd throw away, 'cause I knew I had one in my book. What was the use of keeping a whole lot of 'em?" he inquired, ingenuously.

This man of the glorious voice is singularly outspoken. For instance, he doesn't think that Tetrazini, the idol of San Francisco, will make her debut in New York this season. When pressed for a reason, he was just a wee bit enigmatical.

"Why," said he, "she's got that little Italian Bazelli round her neck, and he can't sing, and she won't stand for his being in the chorus."

You, reader, are at liberty to place your own construction upon this side light into the realms of grand opera, and to your aid bring the remark that Bazelli would probably use his stiletto if he could only over-never be replaced. The score of Mascagni's opera, with his autograph and photograph, and an inscription to me in Italian—it read like this:

"A" Arthur Cunningham, Alfio Per recordo, Marzo, 1903. P. MASCAGNI."

"I lost all my songs, too," he continued. "Meyerfeld wanted me to sing at the Orpheum right away after the earthquake, but my music was all gone, so what was I to do?" He questioned blankly.

"But just think," this from Fogarty, "I lost the piano score of Bellini's 'Norma,' with autograph and photograph, published by Recordi in 1831 or '33."

"Do you know," interposed Cunningham, "I sang the last line that was ever sung on the stage of the old Tivoli? They were of his hands curled themselves in more pronounced fashion.

"No. I'm the baby."

"Ah, but you're all right," reassured Cunningham.

"That's so—just like a professional," comforted Fogarty.

The "Baby" is quite a substantial specimen, as can testify those who have seen him and heard him sing "I Fear No Foe."

He is a Native Son, is Frank Thompson.

"I'm a Californian," he explained rapidly, sitting upright in his pride of birth, while the little finger of his right hand took on, if anything, an added curve, and the sparks from his cigar revived.

"I was born right over here"—he waved his hand in a direction which might mean north or south—"at Centerville. I'm six feet four and weigh two hundred and ten pounds!" Having delivered himself of this, Be-

Cunningham, with quick sympathy, shifting his remark from me to the "Baby," while Fogarty leaned forward and touched him affectionately on the shoulder. "If any man's done more singing for charity than you in San Francisco, I'd like to know it, Frank."

"Were you at Idora on my first night?"

"No," I confessed. Someway it's always been my lot in life to miss the thrills.

"Ah, I'm sorry you weren't. You should have seen them. They said it was 'When Thompson Comes Marching Home,' instead of 'When Johnny Comes Marching Home.'"

This with a look as of ambition satisfied. Again the two loyal ones rallied to his support.

"Yes, indeed; it was great, great!" put in Fogarty. "No professional could have done more."

Cunningham laughed. "You ought to have been there. They took Fogarty for him at first; it was funny!" and the baritone's rotund sides shook.

"They did?"

"Yes. You know the make-up's the same in General Allen." Here Cunningham's pink fingers made a motion as if stroking an imaginary brawny adornment of his chin—"only his"—pointing an index finger at the unabashed Fogarty, "comes off every ten minutes or so, and his," the finger this time marked Thompson, "stays on."

Amazed, I looked at Fogarty. He, too, was stroking an imaginary goatee, and lo! Baby Thompson was toying with the real thing. He seems proud of that little pointed bit of chin beard, and at intervals thereafter touched it softly, as though fearful lest it, too, might follow the fate of

"and I'm bound to say that the other two men rejoiced with him. Then Cunningham unbent—he has something of an Englishman's reserve at times. 'I'll tell you a funny story'—this as aside to the body guards—"you know this morning a woman came out to Idora, and wanted the manager to put on one of her own songs instead of one in the play, and she was quite indignant because he wouldn't. 'You know, madam,' he told her, 'We lease these operas and have to sing them just as they are written, or they could bring action against us.'"

"But in 'When Johnny Comes Marching Home' Mr. Cunningham sings 'My Own United States!'" she remonstrated. "Yes, but madam, didn't you know that that song is in the opera? It was written for it!"

"That's not so!" she snapped. "My Own United States" is sung every day in our public schools!"

Here Fogarty woke up again. He raised his hands—one to either side of his face, spread wide his fingers and then clinched his two fists tightly, while the diamond in the broad gold band glittered. "There's one thing I don't think's been made enough of, and that's the fact that they don't sell liquors," the two fists came down emphatically on either knee, "at Idora Park!"

"That's so!" chimed the others, though why the idea should appeal so strongly to Frank Thompson was more than I could understand, since a delicate hint had conveyed the information that the Native Son did not depend entirely upon his singing for his livelihood—in fact, it is rather an open secret that Thompson's

The following refers to Manager Ingersoll, who started Idora Park:

Of widespread interest to the summer amusement world and park people of the country is the announcement of the retirement of Frederick Ingersoll of Pittsburg from the active direction of the big Washington and Scranton Luna parks. Mr. Ingersoll does not sever his connection with either of the resorts, but steps down from the management of them to devote his time to his many other interests. Mr. Ingersoll remains in active charge of the Luna parks at Pittsburg and Cleveland both of which were designed and constructed by him.

To set at rest any rumors relative to his retirement from the Washington and Scranton parks, a reporter requested Mr. Ingersoll to make a statement regarding his plans. To a representative in Pittsburg, the park magnate said:

"I have retired from active participation in the direction and management of the Scranton and Washington parks to enable me to devote the greater part of my time to my park construction work, which has achieved mammoth proportions. I still retain a goodly interest in both parks which have made a most excellent showing this season.

"I have found that it is too great a strain upon one man to manage a chain of big parks and direct the construction of as many more. For that reason, I have turned over part of the work to other hands.

"At the present time, plans are already drawn up for four big parks which will be in readiness for the opening of next season. The construction work is well under way in our factories and active work on the ground will be begun shortly. In addition to this work, we have in course of preparation designs for as many more big amusement resorts to be erected in different parts of the country.

"We are busy all the year installing our amusement attractions in different parks of the country. At the present time we have construction crews at work in twelve different parks.

"The prospects for the success of our Mexico venture, the Mexidrome, in the City of Mexico, which opens for the first time within a few weeks are more glittering than ever. The active co-operation of big City of Mexico interests have insured a brilliant career for the resort. Americans in the Central American republic are enthusiastic over the enterprise.

"At the head of our construction work and engaged in designing and planning our new parks are such men as Alfred Robinson, the well-known scenic and landscape authority; A. L. Palmer, the electrical inventor and engineer, and J. A. Miller, the most successful builder of park ride amusements in the country. These men are in direct charge of the different departments of park construction.

"My retirement from the Washington and Scranton parks will in no way affect the managerial policy of the two big amusement grounds."

ELEANOR ROBSON'S REPERTOIRE.

The return last week of George C. Tyler, general manager of the Liberty attractions, was followed by his announcements for the coming season.

Of most importance, probably, is the announcement concerning Eleanor Robson, who will open the Liberty theater about September 20 with Israel Zangwill's new play, "Nurse Marjorie." Following this engagement, the favorite actress will appear in "Susan in Search of a Husband," by Eugene W. Presbrey, from Jerome K. Jerome's short story, and in connection a one-act play, "Tina," by Miss Clothilda Graves. In November she will appear in a new play by Mrs. Humphrey Ward and C. Haddon Chambers, called "Agatha," and Mrs. Ward will make her first visit to America to see the premiere. Mr. Chambers will come over to stage it. Included in her repertoire this season will be "The Girl Who Has Everything," in which Miss Robson appeared a part of last season. In January she will do "The Lady of Dreams," and there will be a production of an old classic comedy and a new version of Judge Robert Grant's play, "Unlabeled Bread," by Leo Ditchstein. There will also be a new one-act play by Alfred Sutro and others, due announcements of which will be made later.

Charles Cartwright, of England, has been engaged as general stage manager, and it is announced that each play will be presented regardless of its success or failure. H. B. Warner, son of Charles Warner, has been engaged as Miss Robson's leading man, and it will be his first engagement in New York. Reuben Fox and Ada Day have been engaged for the cast.

Miss Robson and her mother, Madge Carr Cook, now at St. Valerie-sur-Somme, on the French coast, sail for New York on La Provence, August 24.

While abroad Mr. Tyler engaged Yvette Guilbert and Albert Chevalier, who will arrive in October for a tour of six weeks of one and two nights in the principal cities. These actors will then return to England under the banner of Charles Frohman.

During December or January Mr. Tyler will present a new and original play by C. Haddon Chambers, entitled "Sir Anthony." He has also arranged for a new play by Louis N. Parker. It is on the spectacular order, and it will be put on in January in conjunction with Klaw & Erlanger.

Miss Edith Jeffreys opens the Royal theater, London, in September, after which she comes to America.

Mr. Tyler has not arranged for a star to play Charlie Steel in "The Right of Way."

Mr. Tyler sums up his other attractions as they will open on tour as follows: "The Vanderbilt Cup," with Elsie Janis, at the Colonial theater, Chicago, July 29; "Cape Cod Folks," at the Boston theater, Aug. 29, in Punksawney, Pa.; "The Squawman" with William Faversham, at Power's theater, Chicago, Sept. 10; a second company in "The Vanderbilt Cup," at Asbury park, Sept. 11, and a second company in "The Squawman," at Asbury park, Sept. 14.

OPERA IN NORTH.

The success of the San Francisco Opera Company during its eight weeks' engagement at the Grand Opera House, Seattle, Wash., was so pronounced that Messrs. Russell & Drew have decided to build a permanent home for the company in Seattle. The company is now playing a four weeks' engagement at Riverside Park, Boise, City, Ida., after which it will take the road until after such time as will be necessary to remodel the building that is to become the home of the opera company, in Seattle.

The roster of the company is as follows: Frank W. Healy, proprietor and manager; George Knarston, treasurer; George Post, master of transportation; Teddy Webb, stage director; Melvin Stokes, assistant stage director; Mrs. McNeill, wardrobe mistress; Robert Minnett, master machanic; Edward Buechner, musical director; Harry Wood Brown, Bert Bradley, George Kunkel, Ed. Metcalfe, Flo. Barnes, Aida Hemmi, Amy Leicester, Hazel Aubrey, Florence Booth, Nellie Chick, Stella Grey, Virginia Grey, Lenore Butler, Viva McNeill, Eugene Ormonde, Freda Wisner, Geneo Gentry, Violet Wood, Alice Ward, Nellie La Tour, George Alma, Frank Bertrand, George Ellsworth, Joseph Lehmann, George Poetz, Melvin Stokes, Martin Mellor, Joseph Farrell, Eugene Ammann and Roman Johnston, most all of whom were recent members of the Tivoli Opera Co.

THE LIGHT OPERA SEASON.

A summer season of light opera at the Alhambra theater began with "Robin Hood," the second week "Fry Diavolo" was presented and the week I attended the bill was "Pinafore" and "Cavalleria Rusticana," says a New York writer. The tuneful music of the former opera is always inspiring, though naturally, after so many years since first written by Gilbert and Sullivan, the comedy is slightly out of date, but it still evokes many good laughs, and, as all know, the music surpasses most of the comic operas of the present day. They are given under the stage management of Harry Carter and the musical direction of Frank Paret. The "Pinafore" last included Harry Carter, J. K. Murray, Rudolph Koch, P. J. McCarthy, Wilmer Dame, Ernest Fisher, Minnie Jarbeau, Lucille Saunders and Bessie Gibson, while "Cavalleria Rusticana" was sung by Clara Lane, Minnie Jarbeau, Joseph Fredericks, J. K. Murray and Lillian Shattuck. As Sir Joseph Porter, Harry Carter was very good both vocally and dramatically. Minnie Jarbeau was a dainty, pleasing Josephine, as Ralph Rackstraw, Rudolph Koch displayed a tenor voice of sympathetic quality and musical temperament that promises success. The singing of J. K. Murray, the captain, and Lucille Saunders, Buttercup, was satisfactory, as was the remainder of the cast. The male chorus was especially meritorious. The beautiful music of Mascagni's opera is always a delight, but an adequate presentation of it is exacting in its requirements. The opera presented by the Alhambra Opera company during this summer season of opera at popular prices is from the Whitmark Music library, and is certainly a delightful innovation.

FAMINE OF CHORUS GIRLS.

Fame and riches await the twentieth century theatrical Columbus who will go out and discover a flock of new chorus girls. They're needed. With more than 100 musical comedies, about eighty burlesque shows or more of very girly vaudeville specialties there are not enough to go around. The Shuberts are putting out fifteen musical plays, Charles Dillingham will put out five, Klaw & Erlanger will have several of them, Colonel Savage will keep four or five in the field, and numerous other producers will send out from one to five plays requiring from twenty to fifty corymbes. Rehearsals for several of these entertainments are being delayed because of the dearth of beauties.

The elevation of the chorus girl to stardom or to leading ladyship, her accumulation of a rich husband and her retirement, and numerous other causes have brought about the chorus girl famine. Recruiting agents have been sent to Washington, Philadelphia and Boston. A mere half-dozen girls without claim of beauty was the harvest. In Boston, where it is said that every girl who isn't a school teacher or a clerk in a library is a chorister, the crop has failed almost entirely.

Conditions are little better in Chicago, which has an old and young chorus girl population of about 800. The burlesque companies are finding recruiting here a difficult task. The Ringling circus took out about sixty girls, who had heretofore been available for the "ball" shows, and Hagenbeck's circus last week took twenty more of them, although it was only with the greatest difficulty that they could be induced to join a circus ballet. The closing of Pains Spectacle threw fifty-six ballet dancers out of work. Several of them joined the Hagenbeck show, others have fled to the burlesque choruses, and still others will soon be found in the musical comedies.

The producers of musical plays now demand that the choristers shall be equipped with curves in their voice as well as in their visible get-up. This eliminates about seventy-five per cent of the old-timers from consideration. Beauty is wanted, but not beauty with a screech.

A large number of music and dramatic schools in Chicago has made it a favorite recruiting point and Colonel Savage long ago taught other producers that the best of all singing choruses are assembled here. Julian Mitchell, Richard Carle and others can likewise give testimony on this point.

But now that nearly all the experienced Chicago chorus girls are employed, the producers will probably have to look to Peoria, Oskosh and Winneamac.

AT CHICAGO THEATERS.

The engagement of "Told in the Hills" at Powers has been extended from four weeks to eight, owing to the success which has attended the play. Changes in the nature of improvements have been made, and in its present shape the piece is brim full of life and action. Crystal Herne has succeeded Mabel Roebuck in the role of Rachel Hardy. She endows the part with buoyancy and dash and presents a charming picture as the western girl.

At the Colonial Saturday night, "Forty-five Minutes From Broadway" closed the twenty-sixth week of its appearance in Chicago. During all this time the attendance has kept up remarkably and the closing performances were given before crowded houses.

The fourth successful week of Bedford's "Hope" began at the Great Northern Sunday. The big race scene of the third act is a powerful magnet that has attracted large audiences throughout the engagement so far. Messrs. Stair & Havlin, who are largely interested with Lincoln J. Carter in exploiting "Bedford's Hope," splendid voice is only a sort of side issue with him. Off the stage he engages in another occupation—that of traveling salesman for a liquor firm. Be that as it may, he seemed to rejoice in the fact that no liquor is sold out on the grounds.

"There's a jail out there," added Cunningham, and any one who don't behave themselves—" what might happen to an offender could best be imagined by the look of stern justice which sat on the baritone's usually placid countenance.

"We're going to put on 'Robin Hood' pretty soon."

"You'll be Will Scarlet!" exclaimed Joe Fogarty to "Baby," who brightened perceptibly—he'd been looking bored—"and you'll be Little John!"

"I'll be whatever I'm cast for," retorted the baritone, showing his teeth in a good-natured smile.

"If Hartman says 'Cunningham, you're to be Little John,' all right, I'm Little John! If he says I'm to be somebody else, all right too; I take my lines—" his fingers clutched an imaginary book over which the ruddy head bent—"and study 'em. I always do as I'm told."

"But who's going to be your contralto?"

"We're considering 'em." Evidently there's more than one applicant. Heaven grant that the accepted one be of good voice, for memories of Jessie Bartlett Davis will intrude themselves unconsciously whenever Robin Hood is called to mind.

"There's another thing, and I'm glad Hartman spoke of it—I'm always on time. It don't matter when a rehearsal is called, I'm there. Otherwise I'd have saved something at the time of the fire. I lived right down in town close to the Tivoli. If I'd been living out near the park, I'd have saved most everything." Cunningham said this.

"You're over here now?"

"Yes, indeed. My home's within two blocks of Idora. I believe in being on hand."

"So do I," supported Fogarty.

"It's like any other business"—this from "Baby," "a man should always keep his engagements."

"Of course, all professional people should. It doesn't matter what they're doing. Time might mean money to some one who is kept waiting." The trio were of one mind regarding the importance of being prompt.

are highly delighted with the record business being done by it, at the Great Northern. They are in its run a complete refutation of the popular belief that sensational melodrama has no abiding place in any theater in the summer. The fifteenth performance of the play will soon be reached.

Henry Woodruff and Brown of Harvard will continue at the Garrick until August 25th, at which date the piece will have enjoyed a run of eleven weeks. Its fitness for summer entertainment is amply shown in the popularity it has attained.

"The Lion and the Mouse" continues its prosperous engagement at the Illinois, entering on its tenth week. From present indications the play will remain at this theater till September, when it will be transferred to Boston, opening there on Labor Day.

"The Land of Nod" has introduced itself again at the Chicago Opera house, where capacity houses have greeted the performance on several occasions since the opening three weeks ago. Mabel Barrison, who is the star of the piece, is more entertaining than ever. George Fox is becoming one of the opera house favorites and Knox Wilson's antics have been one of the features of the piece for some time. The melodious music, beautiful scenes and handsome costume effects are again the pleasure of the audiences. Tom Armstrong is playing his original role of the Welsh Rarebit and Eile Verne is again the humorous Rory Dory Alton. The chorus has made an emphatic hit. Mabel McCane's personality and Lena Shaw's dainty work as the Chorus Girl are also features. The production is brighter and smarter than ever. The Little Madcaps, Walter Stanton's Giant Rooster and the Dolly Girls have become fully established again with the patrons of the opera house.

Donald Robertson of the Players' Theater has authorized the announcement that Mrs. Modjeska will be a member of the Players' Theater Stock Company. The first play to be put on will be "The Triumph of Yaphet." The author is not named, but it is said to be William Vaughan Moody, whose drama, "The Sabine Woman," was tried out at the Garrick by Margaret Anglin.

All this argued fair, and I hope they meant it, but alack a day! I had my doubts, for Mr. Arthur Cunningham had settled upon the hour of half-past three as the time wherein he could begin to talk, and I had been at the appointed spot on the minute. But the tiny hand of the clock had ticked six times sixty before the trio came.

It may be interesting to note that Mr. Cunningham thinks it will be a long time before we have any Eastern opera companies out here on the coast.

"Look at the losses," exclaimed Cunningham. "There's Cohen—came out here with 'Little Johnny Jones'—was shut off by a landslide in the San Joaquin country, then turned back to the coast line and lost everything he had in another landslide. All the scenery of the 'Yankee Consul' was burned up at the Southern Pacific yards, and then there was the Grand Opera Company in San Francisco at the time of the earthquake—lost everything they brought out. Oh, it'll be a long time before anybody'll venture out here again."

A melancholy hue overspread Mr. Fogarty's countenance.

"Can you think," said he, "of going to bed every night for nine years and waking up next morning, never knowing whether you were holding down your job or going to be fired?"

"That's what used to be over at the Tivoli," confirmed Mr. Cunningham. "We never knew what part we were going to have, or if we were going to have any at all. It's different here—there are no secrets at Idora."

"It's the finest place out there!"

"We're all a happy family!"

"We never have enjoyed so much peace of mind before."

"But I tell you what," Cunningham rose in his wrath, "I don't care how many mean things you put in your paper about 'Doc' Leahey—he used to be manager—he deserves them all."

"The meanest that ever was."

"Wouldn't even keep a contract!"

Evidently "Doc" is not a man beloved of his fellows, judging solely by the outspoken sentiments of the trio.

"Ah, but Idora! I love it out there!" so spoke Cunningham. "and if Oaklanders will stand for us—we—men like Ferris Hartman and myself and the rest of us, will stay here for the balance of our lives!"

A REMARKABLE AND INGENIOUS LOCK

A Jamaica inventor has constructed a remarkable combination lock, that seems likely to defy the most expert lock-picker. The combination is arranged in four sets of letters, twenty-four letter in each, and each letter is represented by a 'figure.' It can be set to a sentence in almost any modern language, one letter being taken from one set, one from another, and so on. The person who would open the lock must first know what letter each figure represents and then what language the sentence is in. The Scientific American considers that one trying to pick the lock would have to work over: $6,000,000 years at the rate of sixty numbers a minute before arriving at the correct combination.
